Reich Mobilizes.

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 15.—Secrecy enforced by bayonets was cast around Germany's preparations for war today as Reichsfuehrer Hitler sent 1,000,000 or more troops goose-stepping across the fatherland in scenes grimly reminiscent of August, 1914.

Out of the ashes of the Versailles Treaty, destroyed by the obscure World War corporal when he became dictator, marched long lines of men under arms, 18-year-old youths of the new Nazi creed and graying veterans of the last Great War, wearing uniforms for the first time since the Armistice.

Never in peacetime has Europe seen such a show of armed strength and beyond Germany there were shudders of alarm.

Despite assurances of the German government that the war games have "absolutely no connection" with the Czechoslovak crisis there was grave apprehension on all sides.

Demonstrates 'Total War.'

Before the end of August, it was indicated, somewhere between 1,000,000 and 1,350,000 German regular army troops and reservists will be demonstrating the "total war" that requires mobilization of the entire nation.

Under leaden skies and intermittent rain Hitler arrived at 8:30 a. m. at Juterbog, an old garrison town of the kaiser era 40 miles south of Berlin, and joined elegantly-garbed Field Marshal Goering for the formal inauguration of the maneuvers.

A heavy cordon of men in steel helmets and bayonet-spiked rifles was thrown about the garrison district. No civilians were permitted to enter and no details of what transpired were disclosed as Der Fuehrer spent the day with the crack troops of the Heimwehr.

Latest Weapons Tested.

Around him were Germany's latest war weapons—long lines of guns that boomed incessantly over the wide shooting range, and aviators of the famous Richthofen squadron.

There was nothing to indicate the number of troops gathered around Hitler—since February commander-in-chief of the German war machine—but townsfolk of Juterbog said "there are more troops than residents." Juterbog's population is above 10,000.

The 35-mile stretch of highway between Juterbog and Potsdam was Motor Scion, in Anguish, Leaps From Boat on Way to Hospital; Dynamite Explodes in His Hand, Hurting Bride.

By the Associated Press.

Little Current, Ontario, Aug. 15.—Daniel G. Dodge, 21-year-old heir to a Dodge automobile fortune of $9,000,000, drowned in Georgian Bay, today when he was being taken to a hospital for treatment for injuries received in a dynamite explosion.

Dodge, honeymooning with his bride of 13 days at Kagawong, Dodge summer camp 20 miles west of here, suffered a skull fracture and loss of his left arm when a stick of dynamite he was examining in his garage exploded in his hands, setting off another stick which lay on a window ledge.

Mrs. Dodge, the former Laurine MacDonald, a $15-a-week telephone operator at Gore Bay when Dodge met her in a north woods vacation romance three years ago, was injured seriously by the explosion.

Doctors at Mindemoya Hospital, 28 miles inland from this Manitoulin Island port 200 miles northwest of Toronto, said she would recover.

Lloyd Bryant, another member of the party, who was employed to work at the camp, also was injured and doctors said he had no chance

Civil Workers Urge Chest Aid Group Health

Association Raises Dues as C. I. O. Union Tries to Open Hospitals.

The United Federal Workers of America yesterday drew the Community Chest into the battle over medical co-operatives, as the Group Health Association announced its projected expansion will be accompanied by a rise in the cost of membership.

With the assertion that "the Community Chest is the largest single buyer of hospital service in the city and therefore influences these hospitals to a considerable extent," the U. F. W. A., a C. I. O. affiliate, urged the Chest to insist that local hospitals open their doors to G. H. A. physicians. At present G. H. A. doctors are denied facilities of every Washington hospital.

The union, many of whose members also belong to G. H. A. threatened to establish a charity fund of

Traffic Group Plans 'Safety' Food Appeals

Bread, Milk Wrappers to Warn Parents of Dangers to Children.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Adopting an "emergency" program to stimulate support of current traffic safety efforts, the Commissioners' new advisory committee yesterday laid plans to circulate safety appeals with city-wide deliveries of milk and bread.

Side-tracking immediate attempts to promulgate a long-range, continuing safety agenda, Brig. Gen. Albert C. Cox, commander of the District National Guard and chairman of the committee, called for prompt action in solving the "present acute problem of child protection."

Determined to prevent additional juvenile accident deaths during remaining weeks of the school vacation, Gen. Cox appointed three subcommittees to study various phases of the current situation and report at another meeting scheduled Thursday.

In turn, he said, these recommendations will be discussed by the full committee and results will be forwarded to the Commissioners for immediate action.

And as this group of civic and municipal leaders met at the National Guard armory yesterday, two

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 15.—The seven-year-old love idyl of Lupe Velez and Johnny Weismuller, which had some of the characteristics of a Mexican revolution, came to an end today in Judge Charles Burnell's divorce court after Lupe painted a vivid picture of her Tarzan in a "morose mood."

The tempestuous actress from San Luis Potosi, Mexico, came into court after many false starts and obtained an interlocutory decree.

When the former Olympic swimming champion was in one of his "moods" he broke enough crockery to outfit a tea shop, she said, and he was in one of the moods most of the time.

"For seven years he is an actor at Metro," she said, "and all he say is 'ugh.' So he take it all out on me at home. He talk, talk, talk, talk all the time."

She said he frequently emphasized his conversation by pegging dishes or pieces of furniture at the wall, and that under these circumstances she usually "feexed heem" by replying:

"Ees zat so?"

The betting was even up to the time court opened that Miss Velez would not make the required appearance. She has been suing Weismuller or threatening to sue annually since they were married at Las Vegas, Nev., in October, 1933.

A property settlement was arranged out of court under which Miss Velez will receive $200 weekly for 156 weeks and their $50,000 Beverly Hills, Calif., home. Weismuller will keep his $15,000 yacht and a speedboat.

Heat Tops D.C. Record; 3 Collapse

Mercury at 96.4 Degrees; Showers Are Possible for Today.

Arlington Bridge Marks 103 at 4 P.M.; Humidity Is 'Normal.'

Three men collapsed from heat exhaustion yesterday as the hottest weather of the year hit Washington, forcing temperature up to 96.4 at 4 p. m. Previous high was 96.3, recorded July 10.

Holding out some hope of relief to the sweltering city, the Weather Bureau forecast possible thunderstorms late this afternoon or tonight and again tomorrow, accompanied by gentle southwest winds. The day is due to start hot and bright, however.

Parks and squares were crowded all through the night as hundreds fled stifling apartments and rooming houses, many stretching out on the grass until dawn.

Ernest B. Osti, 20, collapsed while working on a construction job at North Capitol and Gallatin streets. After treatment at Freedmen's Hospital for heat exhaustion he was taken to his home at 560 F street northwest.

Visitor Overcome.

A second victim of the blazing sun was Wiley Fuse, 21, colored, of 424 First street northwest, who was released from Providence Hospital after treatment for heat exhaustion.

Parker S. Washburn, 28, of Cincinnati, was overcome by heat and brought to Georgetown Hospital from Bethesda, Md., where he is visiting. He was treated there and later released but suffered a relapse and was returned to the hospital.

United States Public Health Service employes at the Constitution avenue headquarters stopped work as thermometers rose. Simultaneously Treasury employes in the division of public debt, accounts and audits, Fourteenth and D streets southwest, were excused for the rest of the day.

The Treasury chief clerk's office said this practice is followed whenever excessive heat threatens the well-being of workers in offices not equipped with air conditioning.

Humidity Normal.

The mercury rose to the summer's peak after a low of 72 at 6 a. m. Humidity was 42 per cent at midafternoon, described by the Weather Bureau as approximately normal for Washington with temperature at 96.4.

Thermometers in various sections of Washington revealed the usual variations on both sides of the "official" figure. At the Arlington Bridge control station temperature stood at 103 at 4 p. m.

3 Navy Fliers Die In Bomber Crash Near San Diego

San Diego, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Three Navy aviators were killed late today when their torpedo bomber crashed near Rosedale, 10 miles north of here, while on a routine flight.

The dead were:

Ralph Thomas Carter, aviation chief ordnance man, San Diego.

Donald Fay Smith, radio man, third class, Des Moines, Iowa

All were attached to the Third Torpedo Squadron of the U. S. S. Saratoga, temporarily stationed here.

147 Drown as Ship Sinks in Typhoon

Shanghai (Tuesday), Aug. 16 (U.P.). The German steamship Hansa sank, drowning 147 Chinese, after ramming the anchored British ship Tungwo in the Yangtze River near Tungchow today.

The collision occurred while the Hansa was out of control in a typhoon sweeping that section of the river.

Larger Social Security Benefits to Idle Urged

Larger benefits to the unemployed and payment over a longer period of time were urged yesterday by the Washington Industrial Union Council in a statement marking the third anniversary of the social security act.

"Many State laws contain features far better than those of the District," the statement concluded, "and we shall strive not only to support what we have but to bring the District up to and beyond the standards of other States."

AAA Boosts '39 Benefits 200 Million

Other Provisions of New Program Similar to This Year's.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace last night announced a 1939 Agricultural Adjustment Administration program increasing Government payments to farmers by more than $200,000,000.

Provisions of the program, except for increased benefit payments, are similar to those put into effect this year under the new farm act. They follow closely recommendations made by 100 farmer-committeemen at a meeting which ended Saturday.

Increased Government benefits will be derived from the $212,000,000 price-adjustment fund appropriated by the last Congress. Payments for soil conservation and soil-depleting acreage diversion will be about the same as this year, Wallace said.

Subsidies Specified.

In appropriating the $212,000,000 fund, Congress specified that subsidies should be paid cotton, corn, wheat, rice and tobacco growers if the 1939 price is below 75 per cent of parity, which is the average of the 1909-14 level. The payments would not be large enough, however, to bring farm prices on any of the five commodities up to parity, officials said.

Probable rates of payments to farmers participating in the 1939 program were listed by Wallace as:

Cotton: 1.8 to 2 cents a pound plus the price-adjustment payment of 1.8 to 2 cents a pound, a total of 3.6 to 4 cents a pound on the farm's normal yield per acre of cotton for each acre in the cotton allotment.

Other Payments.

Corn in the commercial area: 8 to 10 cents a bushel, plus a price-adjustment payment of 5 to 6 cents, a total of 13 to 16 cents per bushel on the farm's normal yield per acre for each acre in the corn allotment.

Wheat: 16 to 18 cents a bushel, plus a price-adjustment payment of 10 to 12 cents per bushel, a total of 26 to 30 cents per bushel on the farm's normal yield per acre for each acre in the wheat allotment.

Rice: 8 to 10 cents per hundred pounds, plus a price-adjustment payment of 12 to 15 cents per hundred pounds, a total of 20 to 25 per hundred pounds on the farm's normal yield per acre for each acre in the rice allotment.

Potatoes: Approximately 3 cents a bushel on the farm's normal yield

James Roosevelt Influence Denied In Sinclair's Case

By the United Press.

The Justice Department yesterday struck back at critics of James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President, denying he had influenced the department to drop indictments against the Sinclair Refining Co. in the Madison, Wis., antitrust cases.

Declaring a statement by Alva Johnston, magazine writer, inferred such influence had been used, the department said it was a "direct reflection upon the integrity of the four attorneys of the Department of Justice who were solely responsible for the conduct of the grand jury proceedings" in which the Sinclair indictment was dropped.

Johnson's allusion to the Sinclair case was made last week after Collier's Magazine published an article by young Roosevelt answering charges made by Johnson in the Saturday Evening Post.

George Calls Roosevelt Attack A 'Second Sherman's March'

Georgia Senator Declares He'll Repulse Administration Effort to Defeat Him; Says President Is 'Misinformed' About His Liberalism.

By the Associated Press.

Waycross, Ga., Aug. 15.—In a cheer-punctured speech, Senator George declared militantly today he would repulse President Roosevelt's effort to drive him from the Senate—and inferred the President was "misinformed" in condemning him as a foe of liberalism.

"The Democratic party is not and cannot become a one-man party," the Senator said. "It must allow freedom of opinion and speech if it is to remain a true liberal party.

In his first address since Mr. Roosevelt's Barnesville indorsement of Lawrence S. Camp to succeed him, the grey-haired lawmaker termed the almost unprecedented battle an "uneven contest" because of the party chief's power, but added firmly, "I have no fear of the result."

SENATOR GEORGE.

He said the dominant question was whether the people "are capable of choosing their own servants."

The Senator declared "the nature and the character of our Government unquestionably and imperatively place the duty and the responsibility on the people . . . to make their own choice in the selection of their representatives."

"So I come in this campaign acknowledging my responsibility to the people of Georgia . . . and only to the people of Georgia."

Senator George said he was not worried by "headlines in the papers about Federal funds flowing into this State."

"I serve notice now that you can-

Tammany Leader Brands Procedure 'Politics;' Dewey Confident.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 15.—Six jurors were chosen today at the opening of the trial of James J. Hines, veteran Tammany leader of the Eleventh Assembly District, who is charged with having conspired with the gang of the late "Dutch" Schultz to run the city's "policy racket." On trial alone, among defendants who have died by violence, who are missing or who have turned State's evidence, Hines had "okayed" each of them by a nod in conference with his attorneys, and was scoffing to friends that the trial was "politics."

Don L. Caldwell, sales manager of an air conditioning firm.

Hugh C. Harle, stock broker.

Fred D. Suydam, insurance broker.

Ernest G. Hapgood, insurance salesman.

Six more jurors and two alternates remain to be chosen when the trial reopens at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney, and Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief of defense counsel, used 12 and 11 peremptory challenges in the first day of the trial. Justice Pecora ruled that prosecution and defense were to be allowed 20 challenges each for the jury of 12, and two more for the two alternates.

When court adjourned today at 6:30 p. m., Dewey expressed contentment with the six first jurors produced in the day's proceedings. "I think they comprise a most sat-

Harrison Sees Higher Middle Bracket Taxes

Cites Necessity of Lower Exemptions After Talk With President.

Possibility Congress may reach into the lower and middle income brackets for more revenue was suggested yesterday by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Harrison said that unless business conditions improve, it might be necessary to decrease income tax exemptions and increase the rates in the middle brackets. But he predicted stout Senate resistance of any attempt to restore the 1936 undivided profits tax schedules.

The Senator said revision downward of income tax exemptions would be entirely dependent on business conditions and their direct affect on Treasury receipts. He hinted an upturn would make changes unnecessary.

Proposals by Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, to broaden the income tax base and raise surtaxes on middle bracket incomes have been before the Senate Finance committee for the last four years.

The LaFollette plan would reduce the personal exemption for married taxpayers from $2,500 to $2,000 and the exemption for single persons from $1,000 to $800. It would tax middle bracket earners more nearly in proportion to the tax on incomes over $50,000.

Frey Urges Inquiry on Aliens To Study Reds in Government

By the Associated Press.

A labor leader's suggestion that the special House committee investigating "un-American" activities turn its attention to Federal Government departments led to a dispute yesterday among committee members as to whether it had not done so.

John P. Frey, head of the American Federation of Labor's metal trades department, made the suggestion in the midst of testimony intended to show that the Communist Party had altered its policy in the United States after the formation of the C. I. O. in order to "take advantage of the division in the ranks of organized labor."

When the stocky, gray-haired witness referred to Harry F. Ward as chairman of the Civil Liberties Union, Representative Mason (Republican), Illinois, a committee member, interrupted to ask:

"Is that the same man who is head of the League for Peace and Democracy?"

"Yes," Frey replied.

"That's all very interesting," Mason said, "in view of a meeting to be held in Washington tonight at which a radical young labor leader of Mexico—Toledano—is to speak.

"That meeting has been sponsored by Government officials, most of whom admitted they are members of the League for Peace and Democracy."

Asserting the league was one of the agencies through which the Communist Party carried on propaganda work, Frey added:

"I would like to suggest that the committee might start some of its

Broader Act Asked By Chief Executive

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt last night indirectly took a hand in the Maryland Senatorial primaries by singling out Representatives Lewis for praise for his pioneer work in social security.

Lewis immediately transformed the Presidential bouquet into political cash. His voice followed Mr. Roosevelt's on the air in an acid denunciation of Senator Tydings and his vote of "present" on the social security bill.

There was no mention of Tydings or the Maryland primaries in the President's speech, but Lewis supplied the missing link.

State Hears Address.

Stepping across the hall from the Shoreham ballroom, where 450 social security board officials and guests were celebrating the third anniversary of the act, Lewis faced a microphone connecting a Statewide radio network.

Shirt-sleeved and sweating, he was ready when the President ceased speaking. He pictured "two million grandmas and grandpas, whose arms are no longer swift or strong enough to turn the great wheels of industry; who are on their way to the poorhouse and from there perhaps to a pauper's grave."

"Senator Tydings," he asked, "what is your answer to their pleas for security in their old age, yea or nay? Senator Tydings—I answer 'present.'"

Impersonates Clerks.

Impersonating the clerks of the Senate calling the roll, he pased the same question to his absent opponent for "the blind, groping along the highway of life," for the "millions of dependent children brought into the world without any will of their own," for "employes, outlawed of their right to work by no fault of their own."

"Shall help be given them?" asked Lewis. "How do you vote, Senator Tydings, yea or nay. Senator Tydings—I vote 'Present.' Is that courage? Courage, indeed! * * * Tydings was present, but what happened to his conscience and courage?"

The President, without mentioning the bitter Maryland Senate contest in which the "100 per cent" Lewis is seeking to unseat the anti-Administration Tydings, had supplied the springboard for the attack and launched the Administration's attempted "purge."

Lewis Leads List.

He had placed the name of Lewis at the top of a list of four legislators who fathered the social security act and had said they deserve "the gratitude of us all." At the last minute he had ad libbed another line into his prepared address, referring to Lewis as "one of the American pioneers in the cause of social security."

The President spoke from the White House, but his address was rebroadcast to the third anniversary celebrants at the Shoreham and over a Nation-wide hook-up. From the celebration, Senator Wagner had introduced the absent guest speaker.

"Because it has become increasingly difficult for individuals to build their own security single-handed, Government must now step in and help them lay the foundation stones, just as Government in the past helped lay the foundation of business and industry," the President said, in a plea for improvement and extension of old age

Guffey Ticket Unable to Give Itemized Costs

Treasurer Tells Senate Inquiry Accounts Were Lumped.

By the Associated Press.

W. L. Miller, treasurer of the Kennedy campaign committee of the Guffey ticket in the Pennsylvania primary, informed the Senate campaign Expenditures Committee yesterday he was unable to furnish an itemized accounting of contributions and expenses for the Senatorial primary campaign of S. Davis Wilson.

Miller advised the committee that the expense for the entire Kennedy ticket, including Wilson, Thomas Kennedy, for Governor; Ralph H. Smith, for lieutenant governor, and Edith D. Dewitt, for secretary of internal affairs, had been handled as one ticket and that "it cannot be determined nor can any segregation be made as to what is related to any particular candidate."

Miller gave the total expense of the ticket as $353,847 and receipts as $355,773.

Senator Sheppard, chairman of the committee, away from the Capitol, prevviously had written Miller to "please state specifically what amounts were received and what amounts were expended in behalf of Mr. Wilson."

G. Mason Owlett, unsuccessful candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination, reported his committee had received $5,025 in contributions and he had loaned it $8,000. He said it had spent $11,463.

Legislature to Recess.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 15.—Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence, after a five-hour caucus of Democratic legislators, said tonight the special session of Pennsylvania's Legislature would recess this week until the day after Labor Day.

Herbert B. Cohen, Democratic floor leader in the House, said, the House committee investigating charges of bribery and coercion against Gov. George H. Earle and 13 other Democrats "is continuing its investigation, gathering material on the charges, but there will be no public hearings," until the constitutionality of new laws to shift the inquiry from a Dauphin County grand jury to the General Assembly is decided by the State Supreme Court in late September.

In the first week of the session, called a month ago, the Legislature enacted the bills to shift the proposed investigation from the grand jury to the House committee.

Earle now is on vacaton in Mexico.

Jenkins Proposes TVA Defer New Utility Purchases

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Representative Jenkins, Republican, of Ohio, today proposed the Tennessee Valley Authority defer negotiations for purchase of properties of private utilities until after a Congressional committee completes an investigation of the New Deal electric power agency.

Jenkins, a member of the investigating committee, thought "good manners" should present TVA Chairman H. A. Morgan and Director Lilienthal from seeking to expand activities of the authority, pending outcome of the investigation.

The Ohio Republican added that he hoped the next Congress would "curtail" TVA's activities.

Jenkins expressed this view when Lilienthal asked to be permitted to testify concerning the Berry-Marble case so that he might resume negotiations with utility executives.

Mexico Boosts Tariff on Autos Built in U. S.

Mexico City, Aug. 15 (AP).—A sharp increase in tariffs on assembled automobiles, most of which come from the United States, was included today in new import rates announced by the government to become effective August 30.

The automobile rates were hiked from 200 to 700 pesos and on motor buses from 1,000 pesos to 2,000 pesos while the schedules covering 190 other articles were reduced or left at their 1937 levels. The peso has been quoted recently at around 4.90 to the dollar. Informed sources said rates were increased to encourage manufacture in Mexico.

Tariffs on numerous raw and semi-manufactured products, including steel, which Mexico needs for industrial expansion and agricultural development, were reduced and duties were lifted entirely from educational motion picture films and live cattle.

PWA to Retard Funds Allotment

By the Associated Press.

The Public Works Administration soon will slap a State quota on loans and grants in an effort to equalize participation in its 1938 construction program.

Officials said yesterday this was decided by Howard A. Gray, acting administrator, when a recapitulation disclosed the program was 15 days ahead of schedule, its funds two-thirds gone, and a relatively large number of States still backward in qualifying for projects.

Ousted Postmaster's Death Ruled Suicide

Havre de Grace, Md., Aug. 15 (AP).—A verdict of suicide was returned today in the death of Harry A. Coy, 48, who was dismissed as postmaster here Saturday night for neglect of duty.

The coroner said a note was found on the windshield of Coy's automobile which was addressed to Miss Lillian A. Davis, of Havre de Grace, which he said read in part "It's a poor way to celebrate my birthday, but it's the only way out."

He said Coy's note asserted his postoffice accounts "were in order." This was affirmed by Postoffice Inspector R. W. Hudgin, who reported there was "nothing irregular" in Coy's postal accounts.

Text of President's Address on Social Security

Radio Speech Celebrates Third Anniversary of Law's Passage.

The social security act is three years old today. This is a good vantage point from which to take a long look backward to its beginnings, to cast an appraising eye over what it has accomplished so far, and to survey its possibilities of future growth.

Five years ago the term "social security" was new to American ears. Today it has significance for more than 40,000,000 men and women workers whose applications for old-age insurance accounts have been received; this system is designed to assure them an income for life after old age retires them from their jobs.

It has significance for more than 27,500,000 men and women wage earners who have earned credits under State unemployment insurance laws which provide half wages to help bridge the gap between jobs.

Of Note to Needy.

It has significance for the needy men, women and children receiving assistance and for their families—at least 2,300,000 all told; with this cash assistance 1,700,000 old folks are spending their last years in surroundings they know and with people they love; more than 600,000 dependent children are being taken care of by their own families, and about 40,000 blind people are assured of peace and security among familiar voices.

It has significance for the families and communities to whom expanded public health and child welfare services have brought added protection. And it has significance for all of us who, as citizens, have at heart the security and the well-being of this great democracy.

These accomplishments of three years are impressive, yet we should not be unduly proud of them. Our Government in fulfilling an obvious obligation to the citizens of the country has been doing so only because the citizens require action from their representatives. If the people, during these years, had chosen a reactionary Administration or a "do nothing" Congress social security would still be in the conversational stage—a beautiful dream which might come true in the dim distant future.

But the underlying desire for personal and family security was nothing new. In the early days of colonization and through the long years following, the worker, the farmer, the merchant, the man of property, the preacher and the idealist came here to build, each for himself, a stronghold for the things he loved. The stronghold was his home; the things he loved and wished to protect were his family, his material and spiritual possessions.

Security a Common Aim.

His security, then as now, was bound to that of his friends and his neighbors.

But as the Nation has developed, as invention, industry and commerce have grown more complex, the hazards of life have become more complex. Among an increasing host of fellow-citizens, among the often intangible forces of giant industry, man has discovered that his individual strength and wits were no longer enough. This was true not only of the worker at shop bench or ledger; it was true also of the merchant or manufacturer who employed him. Where heretofore men had turned to neighbors for help and advice, they now turned to Government.

Now this is interesting to consider. The first to turn to Government, the first to receive protection from government, were not the poor and the lowly—those who had no resources other than their daily earnings—but the rich and the strong. Beginning in the nineteenth century, the United States passed protective laws designed, in the main, to give security to property owners, to industrialists, to merchants and to bankers. True, the little man often profited by this type of legislation; but that was a by-product rather than a motive.

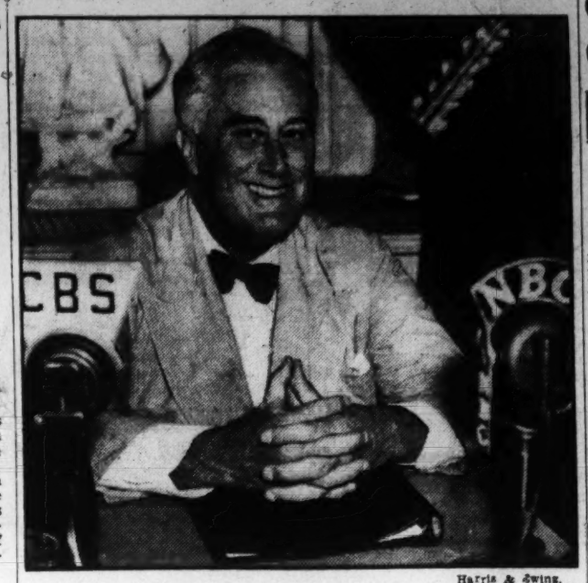
Taking a generous view of the situation, I think it was not that government deliberately ignored the working man but that the working man was not sufficiently articulate to make his needs and his problems known. The powerful in industry and commerce had powerful voices, both individually and as a group. And whenever they saw their possessions threatened, they raised their voices in appeals for government protection.

Labor Needs Voice.

It was not until workers became more articulate through organization that protective labor legislation was passed. While such laws raised the standards of life, they still gave no assurance of economic security. Strength or skill of arm or brain did not guarantee a man a job; it did not guarantee him a roof; it did not guarantee him the ability to provide for those dependent upon him or to take care of himself when he was too old to work.

Long before the economic blight of the depression descended on the Nation, millions of our people were living in wastelands of want and fear. Men and women too old and infirm to work either depended on those who had but little to share, or spent their remaining years within the walls of a poorhouse. Fatherless children early learned the meaning of being a burden to relatives or to the community. Men and women, still strong, still young, but discarded as gainful workers, were drained of self-confidence and self-respect.

The millions of today want, and have a right to, the same security their forefathers sought—the assurance that with health and the willingness to work they will find a place for themselves in the social and economic system of the time.



Harris & Ewing.

The President presenting his radio address last night.

Because it has become increasingly difficult for individuals to build their own security single-handed, government must now step in and help them lay the foundation stones, just as government in the past has helped them lay the foundation of business and industry. We must face the fact that in this country we have a rich man's security and a poor man's security and that the Government owes equal obligations to both. National security is not a half-and-half matter; it is all or none.

Eulogizes Security Act.

The social security act offers to all our citizens a workable and working method of meeting urgent present needs and of forestalling future needs. It utilizes the familiar machinery of our Federal-State Government to promote the common welfare and the economic stability of the Nation.

The act does not offer anyone, either individually or collectively, an easy life—nor was it ever intended so to do. None of the sums of money paid out to individuals in assistance or insurance will spell anything approaching abundance. But they will furnish that minimum necessary to keep a foothold; and that is the kind of protection Americans want.

What we are doing is good. But it is not good enough. To be truly national, a social security program must include all those who need its protection. Today many of our citizens are still excluded from old-age insurance and unemployment compensation because of the nature of their employment. This must be set aright, and it will be.

Some time ago I directed the Social Security Board to give attention to the development of a plan for liberalizing and extending the old-age insurance system to provide benefits for wives, widows and orphans. More recently, a National Health Conference was held at my suggestion to consider ways and means of extending to the people of this country more adequate health and medical services and also to afford the people of this country some protection against the economic losses arising out of ill health.

I am hopeful that on the basis of studies and investigations now under way, the Congress will improve and extend the law. I am also confident that each year will bring further development in Federal and State social security legislation—and—that is as it should be. One word of warning, however. In our efforts to provide security for all of the American people, let us not allow ourselves to be misled by those who advocate short cuts to Utopia or fantastic financial schemes.

We have come a long way. But we still have a long way to go. There is still today a frontier that remains unconquered—an America unreclaimed. This is the great, the nation-wide frontier of insecurity, of human want and fear. This is the frontier—the America—we have set ourselves to reclaim.

This third anniversary would not be complete if I did not express the gratitude of the Nation to those splendid citizens who so greatly helped me in making social security legislation possible and to those patriotic men and women, both employers and employes, who in their daily activities are today making social security work.

First of all, to the first woman who has ever sat in the Cabinet of the United States—Miss Frances Perkins—then and now the Secretary of Labor. Then to the unselfish commission of men and women who, in 1934, devoted themselves to the almost superhuman task of studying all manner of American problems, of examining legislation already attempted in other nations, and of co-ordinating the whole into practical recommendations for legislative action.

Finally, I thank publicly, as I have so often thanked them privately, four men who have had long and distinguished careers in the public service—Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, who is known as one of the American pioneers in the cause of social security; Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, who also was long its advocate; Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, and Representative Doughton, of North Carolina, who carried the bill successfully through the Senate and the House of Representatives. They deserve and have the gratitude of all of us for this service to mankind."

Ford Asks NLRB To Drop St. Louis Plant Complaint

By the United Press.

Asserting that its Constitutional rights had been violated by a prejudiced trial examiner, the Ford Motor Company asked the National Labor Relations Board to dismiss a complaint that it had violated the Wagner act in its St. Louis, Mo., assembly plant.

The company took exception particularly to Dudley's ruling that it violated the labor law through Henry Ford's newspaper interviews in which he opposed labor unions, and through the distribution of "Fordisms" to Ford employes.

Maritime Re-hearing Asked.

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor asked the National Labor Relations Board yesterday to set aside its decision that the C. I. O. Maritime Union was the proper bargaining agent for longshoremen in principal Pacific Coast ports.

Liner's Reconditioning Extended, U. S. Reveals

The Maritime Commission disclosed yesterday that considerable work in addition to that covered in the original contract is being done on the S. S. California, being reconditioned at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co.

Arizona Asks U.S. To Approve Giant Power Dam Plan

By the Associated Press.

Arizona asked the Power Commission yesterday to approve tentative plans for a giant hydro-electric project on the Colorado River.

The development would be located at a site known as Bridge Canyon, 80 miles northwest of Boulder Dam, and would include a dam which would raise the river level 570 feet, and create a lake 78 miles long covering approximately 8,500 acres.

The State said it was planned to develop eventually 1,100,000 horsepower in electric energy.

Coal, Oil Interests Protest Trade Pact

By the Associated Press.

Associations of coal and oil producers, normally vigorous competitors in the domestic hearing field, consolidated forces yesterday in a plea that crude and fuel oil imports be eliminated from consideration in negotiating a trade agreement with Venezuela.

Coal and oil representatives told the committee for reciprocity information any increased volume of oil imports would cause a serious economic shock to their markets.

Workers Urge Chest to Help Group Health its own if the Community Chest refuses to exercise pressure against the recalcitrant hospitals.

When informed by The Post last night of U. F. W. A.'s action, William J. Flather, jr., campaign chairman and member of the executive committee of the Chest, said, "I don't think that the union would pass such a resolution if they understood our position."

"The only place where we can buy service for the people of Washington is at the hospitals," Flather continued. "And even if the Chest is the largest purchaser of their services, we have no right to dictate policy to the hospitals. This is especially true in the case of the hospitals, as we are able to pay only about 70 per cent of their bills to us."

A few hours before the U. F. W. A. resolution on the Community Chest was released, the Group Health Association officially launched its expansion program involving a 27 per cent jump in membership, sizeable increase in dues, repayment of a $40,000 Government loan, enlargement of the I street clinic and a $100,000 campaign for the hospital to be established in Arlington as an answer to opposition of local institutions.

Funds for the hospital will be sought "not only from present and prospective members," the G. H. A. said, "but a special gifts committee will seek aid from large foundations, corporations and individuals of wealth interested in suitable medical care for families of small and moderate means."

"The Medical Society has steadily maintained pressure to prevent our members from admission to hospitals in the District," William C. Kirkpatrick, president of GHA said yesterday. "We have been forced to go ahead on our own and are confident that we will succeed—knowing, as we do, that the public and even a great many members of the Medical Society believe our movement is an answer to the problem of adequate medical care."

15-Bed Hospital Soon.

A temporary 15-bed G. H. A. hospital, to be set up in the reconditioned home of Dr. Richard N. Sutton, of Arlington County, will be ready for use within two or three months, G. H. A. announced.

To meet costs incident to hospital construction, clinic expansion and repayment of the original HOLC loan, GHA will increase its dues.

Present membership costs $2.20 per month for a single person and $3.30 for a family. Under the new scale, charges will be $2.20 for a single person, $1.80 additional for husband or wife of member, $1 additional for all children under 18, $1 each for children from 18 to 21, and $2.20 each for dependents over 21.

Furthermore, the board of trustees suggested a charge of $1 for the first house call in any one illness, primarily "to avoid abuse of the house call privilege," and also a special $25 fee in maternity cases. This new scale of charges will require approval of the members, it was said.

The board, in addition, recommended to members that a $10 membership fee be imposed, and a further $5 fee for new applicants, together with $1 for each dependent.

Explaining the rise in cost, the board of trustees pointed out that it had "no reliable information as to what membership fees and financial resources were necessary to provide services desired by members at the time GHA was organized."

Five meetings will be held this weeks to present to G. H. A. members full details of the expansion program.

The U. F. W. A. resolution on the Community Chest, which was passed by the welfare committee of the union, and released at U. F. W. A.'s national offices, stated that "the hospitals of the city have been obstructing and hampering the work of Group Health Association by denying their facilities to GHA members."

Pointing out that "the status of GHA has been declared to be legally valid" (in a decision of Justice Jennings Bailey in District Court on July 29—a decision subsequently contested by three prominent local physicians), the resolution urges that the Chest "demand" of the District hospitals "that members of GHA be permitted to use their hospital facilities and the services of Group Health physicians within the hospitals."

The resolution warned: "Should the Community Chest advise the U. F. W. A. that it does not see fit to take such a position in the near future, this organization will consider the advisability of instituting another fund to receive charitable contributions for the benefit of institutions which do not discriminate against Group Health."

U.S. Dock Lease Expires.

The United States Maritime Commission announced yesterday the lease of the Hoboken Terminal with the North Atlantic Terminal Service, Inc., which expires August 31, will not be renewed.

AAA Increases 1939 Benefits By 200 Million per acre for each acre grown not in excess of potato allotment.

Tobacco: Probably the same as the 1938 rates for most types.

General soil depleting acreage in Class A areas: $1 an acre compared with $1.25 this year. Nondepleting acreage in Class A areas, 50 to 60 cents an acre this year.

General depleting and nondepleting acreage in Class B areas: 70 cents an acre, the same as this year. Vegetable, orchard, pasture and range land about the same as this year.

AAA Administrator H. R. Tolley said that the farm meeting, while advocating some changes, was certain that the principles of the program were sound and that the 1938 program should not be changed materially.

Crop classifications and soil-building practices similar to those approved in 1938.

Provision that land used for home gardens may be excluded in calculating soil-depleting crops for the farm.

Continuation of efforts to restore grass, land unsuited for crops in the Great Plains area.

The 1939 allotment for wheat was made two months ago at 55,000,000 acres. This compared with 80,000,000 planted for harvest this year and an average of 69,000,000 acres for the last ten years.

Wallace said that in view of the current supply of cotton (13,400,000 bales) the acreage allotment for cotton next year will approximate the 27,500,000 acres this year.

Acreage for corn, tobacco, rice and other commodities for which special allotments will be made in 1939 will be determined upon the basis of the situation affecting these commodities and will be determined after 1938 production is known, Wallace said.

"On the basis of the current production estimate for corn, the 1939 corn acreage allotment for the commercial corn producing area will not be greatly different from the 1938 allotment," Tolley said.

Laboratory Areas Set.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace designated yesterday the four major farm-producing areas in which the four agricultural research laboratories authorized the 1938 farm act will be established.

States included in each area were:

Eastern—Connecticut, Delaware, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia.

Northern—Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota, Wisconsin, Michigan.

Western—Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

A laboratory will be built in each area. None of the sites has been selected. Congress made $4,000,000 available for the laboratories, the sum to be divided equally among them.

Cotton Loans Likely.

Farm Administration officials said yesterday a drop to 8.20 cents a pound in the average closing price of cotton on the ten designated spot markets apparently made 1938 cotton loans mandatory under the new farm act.

investigations in the Federal departments in this city."

"That has been done," Mason replied.

Later, Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, who was out of the committee room at the time of Mason's statement, told reporters there had been "no investigation of Government officials as such."

Frey told newsmen his action Saturday in naming 60 leaders and organizers of the C. I. O. as members or supporters of the Communist Party had resulted in him receiving numerous anonymous threats by telephone at his home and office.

One of the callers warned him, Frey said, that if he continued his testimony "we will catch up with you." Another wanted to know who was paying for his "manufactured evidence," he said.

Another development was a demand from Joseph Curran that he be given an opportunity to repudiate, as a "deliberate lie and forgery" Frey's evidence that Curran was a Communist.

Curran, president of the National Maritime Workers Union, and one of the most important C. I. O. labor leaders named in Frey's testimony, communicated with Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, who said the labor officials would be allowed to appear before the committee.

Reading from what he said was a report of the Communist Party's central council in New York in May, 1937, Frey said leaders of the group agreed the "best way to get Communist Party members into office is through the unions organized by John L. Lewis (C. I. O. chairman)."

Frey told the committee again that he did not believe Lewis was a Communist, but said it was "significant" that the first men selected by Lewis as his aides in the C. I. O. included some whom he had denounced as Communists.

Boston Inquiry Begins.

Boston, Aug. 15 (AP).—An investigation of all un-American activities in the New England area was launched today as Edward Sullivan, investigator for a special Congressional committee, heard witnesses in a Federal building office.

D.C. Police Raid Homes for 2 in Sanford Killing

Mothers of Both Plead With Them to Surrender.

A city-wide search early yesterday which included raids upon two houses failed to yield two youths sought by police in connection with the murder of George E. Sanford, 20, of 1213 K street southeast. Police indicated the raids will continue, unless they surrender.

Lieut. George Darnall, chief of the homicide squad, said the places visited by police were often frequented by the boys.

Mother Makes Plea.

Meanwhile the mothers of both the hunted boys appealed to their sons, through Frederick R. Wilson, attorney, to give themselves up.

One plea, addressed to "George," and signed by Wilson, reads:

"Your mother has retained me as your counsel and it is her wish and my advice that you immediately communicate with me, as I have made arrangements for surrender to the authorities. There is danger you may be injured by police when your arrest is made if the officers think you are armed."

The mother of the other boy, according to Wilson, begged him to surrender since she and his father were near collapse because of anxiety.

Confident of Capture.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson said he was confident the fugitives will be captured.

"It's impossible for them to go much longer. Why the one shot in the hand probably has an infection now. We'll get them. It's only a matter of time."

One youth, arrested Saturday night, still was being held at the Fifth Precinct station. Despite the fact he denies being with Sanford and the others, police said they are sure he has definite knowledge of

Skim-Milk Suit May Cover 1939's Well-Dressed Man

By the Associated Press.

Fashion experts soon may suggest:

"Wear skim milk suits and dresses."

The Agriculture Department hinted as much yesterday in an announcement that its scientists have developed a process of making synthetic wool from casein, a by-product of skim milk.

The new fiber, the department said, has a chemical composition similar to wool. It was described as faintly yellow, closely resembling the best grade of thoroughly washed and carded Merino wool.

The process was developed by Stephen P. Gould and Earl O. Whittier of the Bureau of Plant Industry.

Rev. E. R. Branson To Head Adventist Missions in Egypt

The Rev. Ernest Lloyd Branson will sail with his wife and son September 7 to take up his duties as superintendent of Seventh-day Adventist missionary activities in Egypt.

Son of the Rev. W. H. Branson, first general vice president of the Seventh-day Adventists' general conference, the Rev. Mr. Branson at present is taking post-graduate studies the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary in Takoma Park, Md.

The Rev. Mr. Branson spent ten years in southern Africa as a youth, when his father directed missionary operations there and evangelistic campaigns in New England and Missouri. For two years he has been president of the Missouri Conference, with jurisdiction over 50 churches.

In Egypt the Rev. Mr. Branson will be under the direction of his father, who is president of section two of the Central European Division Conference, including church activities in Arabia, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Egypt, Palestine and Turkey.

Order to Stamp State Office Mail Arouses Oregon

Salem, Oreg., Aug. 15 (AP).—The State Board of Control bristled with indignation today when Uncle Sam advised every State department that stamps had to be placed on inter-office communications between State buildings.

The Postoffice Department, claiming a monopoly on the postal business, would prevent messengers from carrying communications between State buildings in Salem, Oreg., and other cities, the board said.

"Let's ignore it," Budget Director Wallace Wharton suggested. "No, let's not ignore it. I don't want to have to attend board meetings at the McNeil Island Federal Penitentiary because we used our own messengers," State Treasurer Rufus Holman argued.

Returning Stokowski Is Mum On Garbo—and Mickey Mouse

By the United Press.

New York, Aug. 15.—Leopold Stokowski, the white-haired maestro of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, squatted on a pillow in his stateroom aboard the Normandie today, tucked his heels under his haunches and announced quite firmly there were two things he would not talk about—Mickey Mouse and Greta Garbo.

Was it true that he was married? Going to be married? Wasn't going to be married? Didn't he like Greta?

Stokowski's eyes became as round as marbles. He shook his head so the snow-white mane flopped like a dust-mop, and said:

"I never talk about personal things."

"Weren't you at Ravello?" a reporter asked, pointing a pencil at the maestro. A trace of annoyance passed over Stokowski's face.

"I was in Italy," he said.

"Wasn't Miss Garbo with you?"

Stokowski glanced out of the porthole. He started to say something, then stopped. Finally he began to whistle. Then—

"Please," said Stokowski, with a feathery wave of his hand. "Don't get too subtle with me."

The talk got around to other things. He was asked if it was true that he was going to Hollywood to do the music for a new Mickey Mouse production by Walt Disney.

"That is business," he said. "I never talk about business. You will have to ask Mr. Disney."

One of the reporters stood up.

"What the hell do you talk about?" he asked.

"Music," said Stokowski.

Democrats in Ark. Repudiate Slap at Officials in Politics

Dewitt, Ark., Aug. 15 (AP).—The Arkansas County Democratic convention repudiated today a resolution adopted Friday by the county committee which condemned Federal officials who "use their positions to influence voters in Democratic primaries in the various States."

A resolution adopted today said in part:

"We pledge loyal and enthusiastic support to President Roosevelt as the leader of the Democratic Party, to the national committee, and to our Senators and Congressmen in the future as in the past."

A moment later she screamed, jumped back from the water and an eight-pound black bass flopped at her feet.

U. S. Substituting War Machines for Men, Says Johnson

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 15 (AP).—Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, said here tonight that "in keeping with a program of less war and fewer casualties the War Department is substituting machines for men whenever possible."

Johnson addressed the annual national convention of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

"We have always been eager to disarm," Johnson said, "but obviously we could never do it alone. So long as some nations make force and the threat of force their national policies we must stand on guard."

District Chiefs To Confer on Parking Laws

Hazen Stops New 20-Ft. Rule Enforcement Until After Parley.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday called a conference of municipal officials for next Monday afternoon to discuss modification of the recently tightened parking regulations. He ordered police to avoid enforcement of the rule limiting parking to within 20 feet of the building line at an intersection until after the parley.

At the same time Traffic Court Judge Walter J. Casey fined Francis M. Divilio, 23, of 2101 K street northwest, $2 for violating the new parking law. Divilio, who was convicted last week, immediately appealed. A similar charge against Lawrence Applebaum, 29, of 4804 Third street northwest, was dismissed.

Commissioner Hazen declared he will recommend that the traffic ruling be modified to prohibit parking within 50 feet of all street intersections. Attending the parley will be Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Elwood Seal, corporation counsel; Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst.

Applebaum, charged with illegal parking on Decatur street northwest, between Third street and New Hampshire avenue, said he had parked behind what he thought were the regulatory yellow lines. It was shown that due to the shortness of the street it was impossible to park at all without violating the building-line law.

Arlington Relief Head Applicants Cut to Six

The Arlington County Welfare Board last night chose six out of a list of 40 applicants for the position of superintendent of public welfare.

Hugh J. McGrath, board chairman, said appointment of the superintendent will be made early next week. The position is now held by Mrs. Mae Jacobs, who was appointed to serve until September 1.

Marihuana Dealer Held for Grand Jury

Henry T. Lewis, colored, 27, was held for the grand jury yesterday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage when he pleaded guilty to a charge of violating the narcotics act in marihuana deals.

Bond was set at $500 for the colored man, who was arrested by Detective Sergt. Robert Bryant. Lewis lives at 1313 Ninth street northwest.

District Justices Meet Today to Simplify Rules

May Make Equity and Law Suits All Mere 'Civil' Cases.

Simplification of the rules of practice and procedure of the District Court may emerge today from a conference of four District Court justices in general term session.

Those who are to confer are Associate Justices Oscar R. Luhring, James M. Proctor, F. Dickinson Letts, and Daniel W. O'Donoghue. Any changes in the rules they effect must be held in abeyance for 30 days.

One of the most important changes contemplated by the justices is erasure of the distinction between law and equity cases. All, it is planned, are to be civil cases in the future. The changes are being made pursuant to an act of Congress of June 19, 1934, which directed the United States Supreme Court to simplify certain practices, effective three months after adjournment of the second regular session of the Seventy-fifth Congress. The three-month period will be up a month from today.

Social Security Held 'Cushion' For Depression

Roosevelt, Perkins and Altmeyer Speak on Act's Third Birthday.

The Administration's social security program last night was hailed as a "cushion" against present and future depressions, as 450 members of the staffs of the Social Security Board and other administering agencies celebrated the third anniversary of the act.

"Social security checks going out to wage earners' families supply the one great differences between this and the last depression," Secretary of Labor Perkins told the group. "A cushion is provided all along the line."

Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board, called the program "a partnership of mutual protection between the American people and their Government, a partnership that, as it safeguards the social security of the individual, will inevitably strengthen the economic stability of the Nation as a whole."

Hear President's Voice.

By remote control, the President was introduced by Senator Wagner (Democrat) from the speaker's table at the Shoreham Hotel, and through loudspeakers the celebrants heard Mr. Roosevelt's radio appeal for improvement and extension of the act. The President spoke from the White House.

"The social security act lays claim not to perfection but to progress," Wagner said. "In that spirit of progress, the program will be carried forward without interruption, toward the fullest realization of the noble purposes which have won for it the united support of citizens in all walks of life."

Altmeyer said that "no one but the very wise or the very foolish would attempt to predict the future of social security in America" but he assailed critics "who contend that the cost of security comes too high."

"The cost of insecurity—whether you choose to measure it in dollars and cents or in human health and welfare and courage—is vastly higher than the investment we are now making in present and future security," he said.

80 Per Cent of Workers Enrolled

He said that more than 80 per cent of all gainful workers have applied for old-age insurance accounts, and that 27,500,000 wage earners have earned credits toward out-of-work benefits.

He said every State now has an unemployment insurance law; 28 States are paying benefits and within the next 11 months the remainder will have reached full benefit-paying status.

Outlining progress in social security service for mothers and children, Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the Labor Department's Children's Bureau, called the program "the greatest adventure yet made by the Federal Government in Federal and State co-operation in behalf of mothers and children." She said the program must be further extended "if service is to be in any way commensurate with need."

Other speakers included Representative Lewis, of Maryland; Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of Interior, and Josephine Roche, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. Frank Bane, executive director of the Social Security Board, was toastmaster.

Edwin Waters Dies At Sandy Spring

Edwin Waters, retired farmer and lifelong resident of Montgomery County, died yesterday at Montgomery County General Hospital. He was 79.

Born at Goshen, Md., Mr. Waters had been living recently with his daughter, Mrs. Frank Wilson, of Sandy Spring.

Besides Mrs. Wilson, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Griffith Waters; another daughter, Mrs. Dawson Hammond, of Newmarket, Md.; a son Griffith Waters, of Woodside, Md.; two sisters, Mrs. Laura Griffith, of Laytonsville, Md., and Miss Mary E. Waters, of Baltimore, and a brother, Z. M. Waters, of Goshen, Md.

Funeral services will be held at the home of his son, 9414 Georgia avenue, Woodside, Md., at 10 a. m. Thursday. Burial will be at Goshen, Md.

Roosevelt

and unemployment assistance laws.

Lewis, also a guest speaker at the third anniversary celebration, made no mention of his Maryland contest in his remarks there. Before the President started speaking, he retired to the hotels "Garbo room" for his own State-wide broadcast.

To Maryland listeners his voice followed the President's on the air.

Speaking at Hagerstown, Md., also last night, Senator Tydings did not mention the President's speech or his praise of Lewis. But he predicted the next Congress "will make substantial revisions" in the social security act.

"The money taken from men and women employes is equivalent to an income tax on the lowest earning group," Tydings told the United Democratic Women's Clubs.

"There is much to be desired in the social security act and I am confident that the new Congress will make substantial revisions . . ."

The President was warm in his praise of the diminutive Lewis as one of the four men "whose long careers in the public service have been marked by continuing and successful efforts to help their fellow man."

3 Others Credited.

Joint credit with Lewis for "fathering" the bill through the House was given Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee. The President divided praise for Senate enactment between the liberal Senator Wagner, of New York, and the conservative Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee.

"They deserve and have the gratitude of us all for this service to mankind," he said.

In his radio sequel to the President's remarks, Representative Lewis reminded Maryland voters that he also fathered the first workmen's compensation act as a youthful Maryland State senator.

"Just as we know beyond the peradventure of a doubt that the workmen's compensation act will never be repealed, so also we know that the social security act is here to stay," said Lewis. "It is a milestone in legislation designed for humanity."

Charges "Republican" Votes.

Swiftly he turned to a fiery attack on the voting record of Senator Tydings on 22 measures involving farm, work relief, labor and welfare issues.

"In each instance," he said, "Senator Tydings has voted against the Administration leader in the Senate and with the Republican leader—Vandenberg—who also opposed them. To all these defaults as a Democrat in the Senate, Mr. Tydings answers: 'I have voted according to my conscience.'

"I therefore ask—'What kind of a conscience was it? A Democratic conscience or a Republican conscience?' Surely it was not a Democratic conscience, for the record proves that he has aligned himself with Republicans. Does the Senator believe that he can run on a Democratic ticket, get the votes of the Democratic conscience of Maryland, and meet the duty of his party by offering back a Republican conscience in the Senate?"

Thus the mere mention of Lewis' name by the President was converted into immediate political capital and made the springboard for a direct attack on Tydings by his New Deal opponent.

The President's speech was a 1,500-word recital of the history and benefits of the act and a plea for improvement and extension of the law to include workers not now covered and some form of health insurance.

Lewis' name was mentioned in the closing paragraph as the President paid tribute to "those splendid citizens who so greatly helped me in making social security legislation possible and to those patriotic men and women, both employers and employes, who in their daily activities are today making social security work."

Ahead of the "legislative fathers," the President mentioned Secretary Frances Perkins . members of the 1934 commission which recommended the legislation to Congress.

"What we are doing is good," said the President, "but it is not good enough. To be truly national, a social security program must include all those who need its protection. Today many of our citizens are still excluded from old age insurance and unemployment compensation because of the nature of their employment. This must be set aright; and it will be."

Health Provision Urged.

The President said he had directed the Social Security Board to develop a plan for liberalizing and extending the old age insurance system to provide benefits for wives, widows and orphans. At his suggestion, he said, the National Health Conference considered ways and means of providing more adequate health and medical services, and protection against economic losses arising out of ill-health.

On the basis of these studies, he said, he hoped Congress would improve and extend the law and that "each year will bring further development in Federal and State social security legislation."

Without mentioning the Townsend old-age pension plan, the President "warned" the people not to be "misled by those who advocate short cuts to Utopia or fantastic financial schemes."

He said the people require "action" from their Representatives in Congress, and declared the social security act would still be "a beautiful dream" if they had chosen "a reactionary Administration or a 'do-nothing' Congress."

He asserted it was not the poor but "the rich and the strong" who were first to turn to Government for protection.

"We must face the fact," he said, "that in this country we have a rich man's security and a poor man's security that the Government owes equal obligations to both. National security is not a half-and-half matter; it is all or none."

Small Industrial Groups to Advise Wage-Hour Chief

By the Associated Press.

The wage-hour administration will rely upon small committees from industry to assist in putting into effect the minimum wage and maximum hour provisions of the new law.

Administrator Elmer F. Andrews made this known after his first conference with President Roosevelt yesterday. He said the committees probably would be limited to six persons each, in the interest of efficiency.

There will be no large code groups such as represented industry and trade under the NRA, he added.

Andrews will take the oath of office today.

Berlin

thronged with military trucks and troop transports. Many of the cars have been requisitioned from private owners by military authorities under a recent decree.

Motorcycle dispatch riders darted in and out of traffic, swerving around passenger cars carrying staff officers.

So thorough was this massing of German manhood, in which three classes of reserves were called up for the first time since Hitler reintroduced compulsory conscription in 1935, that most of the workers in the harvest fields today were women.

Government communiques stressed that Germany's war games were no more unusual than those undertaken this summer by France, Italy and other nations. They insisted they were not to be confused with a test mobilization.

Reserves arrived in steady streams at garrison towns and training encampments and were assigned to billets—in some places private homes—by regular army officers.

A war ministry spokesman explained the maneuvers would be held in series, at different dates in different parts of the country, in order not to upset the work of the farm harvests.

The maneuvers in East Prussia, bordering on Poland, Lithuania and Danzig Free City, for instance, will be held later but will be on a larger scale than in any other part of the country.

It is significant that the nervousness abroad is shared by the German population. Not since Hitler assumed power have Germans shown so much anxiety over the possibility of war.

Britain Takes "Soundings."

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Aug. 15.—Under a mask of official silence the British Government today was anxiously watching the developing crisis in Europe, which has reached an extremely dangerous phase with Germany's vast army maneuvers.

Britain is understood to be "taking soundings" in Berlin, as to the real significance of the military exercises, but neither Prime Minister Chamberlain nor any of his cabinet colleagues has seen fit to make a public declaration as to exactly what Britain might be expected to do if the situation worsened.

Although there is no advertisement of the fact, it may be assumed the British Navy, Air Force and Army are taking all the necessary steps to be prepared for war. One inkling of naval activity came with the report the battle cruiser Repulse had hurriedly recalled the marines which it landed in Haifa, Palestine. This may indicate the Repulse is being shifted from the eastern to the western Mediterranean.

A state of alarm is being registered in the money marts here and on the Continent. The turnover of gold in the London bullion market was again heavy today.

Belgium Masses Troops.

Brussels, Aug. 15 (AP).—Forty thousand Belgian soldiers were massed along the German frontier tonight for maneuvers intended to prove this country will never become another Austria.

The maneuvers will be the most spectacular ever held in this country and will be geared to the defense problems of the eastern frontier, where 24 years ago this month the German juggernaut crushed hastily mobilized Belgian defenders.

George Defies Purge, Recalls 'Carpet-Bags'

George

not buy Georgia."

To the accompaniment of handclapping, shouted encouragement and occasional rebel yell, the perspiring veteran termed Mr. Roosevelt's speech a "second march through Georgia" and extended his Civil War analogy when he cried:

"We answered this question before when Federal bayonets stood guard over our ballot boxes and when honest men walked down under the shadow of bayonets in alien, carpet-bagging hands and cast honest ballots for the redemption of this State."

George told in terse sentences of his background, his legislative record and tears welled in his eyes.

"I am a Georgian, bred and born," he said. "A full-time Georgian, my friends.

"I am a Democrat. I fought the party's battles in Congress and I have fought the party's battles upon the hustings; and now for 16 years I have withheld my hand in no political contest of the national business of my party."

Cites Support for Roosevelt.

He cited his support of President Roosevelt in 1932 and 1936 and of former Gov. Al Smith in the campaign of 1928.

He made no direct attack on Mr. Roosevelt's qualifications as President and leader of the national party, but heaped condemnation on John L. Lewis, the C. I. O., the Communist Party and certain Presidential advisers, explaining he did not want his listeners to think he was "mentioning these names in the same breath with that of the President."

Hitting at President Roosevelt's contention he is not in sympathy with the objectives of the New Deal, the Senator said "I have tried to make it plain in this campaign that with all the high purposes of the great period, the troublesome period throug hwhich we have passed and are yet passing, I have been in the fullest sympathy."

Would Vote Same Way.

Summing up his opposition and his position on past and future legislation he said:

"I did not vote for one or two other measures. I believe them to be unconstitutional or else intended to reflect upon the people of my State. I want to make it perfectly plain that, if I go back to the Senate, I will not vote to pack the Supreme Court; I will not vote to control the vast army of Federal employes by any Administration, Democratic or Republican. I want to make it perfectly plain that I will not vote for the anti-lynching bill nor for any other bill that I know is unconstitutional upon any fair test."

The Senator said the Preisdent, "Like all human beings sometimes received misinformation."

"All men in high places are sometimes given misformation," he said, "for the purpose of advancing the interests of those who furnish that misinformation.

"I haven't taken the commands of Dr. C. H. Foreman, the interracial representative in our Interior Department, and if my return to the Senate depends upon the approval of Tom Corcoran, Benny Cohen and Dr. Foreman or Marvin McIntyre, I don't want to go back to the Senate."

(Dr. Foreman replaced Erle Cocke several weeks ago as director of the National Emergency Council for Georgia. He also is director of the PWA power division.)

"I wear as a badge of honor, and will wear it to the end of my days, the condemnation of the Communist Party. . . .

"I wear it a badge of honor now and forever the condemnation of Labor's Non-Partisan League, the Communist group of John L. Lewis. All the people in John L. Lewis' C. I. O. are not Communists, but this so-called Non-Partisan League with (E. L.) Oliver at its head has fought face to face with me, and let me tell you that he and I do not speak the same language. . . . He (Oliver) came to me and demanded that I vote for the reorganization of the judicial branch of this Government. I told him that in my opinion the courts of this Nation were the repository . . . in which we had deposited the American Constitution, with its guarantees for individuals' liberty, and with its sacred guarantee of their rights and privileges."

Fought for Honor.

"Those of us who fought that court bill were not fighting because we were hostile to the reform. Those of us who fought . . . were not fighting against it because we feared anybody or because we wished to court favor with anybody.

"We did not take the easy way. We knew we would pass through the fire. We understood that, but every mother's son of us who took his political life in his hands said, deep down in his soul, that the would go through that fire because the light of it, the flame of it, would light our way to honor through all coming generations of America."

It was chiefly Senator George's opposition to court revision and Government reorganization which drew New Deal fire.

Of the anti-lynching bill, the Senator said it "was carpet-baggery glorified," asked for a show of hands of any who believed he acted unwisely in voting against it and commented that, in the city auditorium crowd, no hands were raised.

"I know that you wanted me to exercise my judgment and not the judgment of Oliver, not the judgment of the sitdown strikers, nor of the Communist Party of Georgia."

(The anti-lynching bill was not generally considered a major White House "must" and was opposed by virtually all Southern Representatives and Senators.)

"Liberal With Limitations."

Launching into a definition of his own beliefs, George declared:

"I am a liberal, but I am a liberal within the limitations of the American Constitution. I follow no man beyond the limits or limitations of that Constitution, which you require me, on oath, to say I will support as your Senator.

"I am a liberal, but I do not belong to that school of liberalism which stands ready to disregard every sound principle of government merely because it is believed that that principle of government is becoming unpopular.

"I am a liberal Democrat. I have stood for the aims and purposes, the high aims and purposes, of this period. I will stand for them, and nothing can prevent me from following a liberal course as I understand it; and I must live up to the very best light I have. But I want it understood that, if the Democratic Party is to be all things to all men, follow every ism under the sun, it will not long command the respect of the American people.

Opposes "One-Man Party."

"I am a liberal Democrat; but Democracy is not a one-man party; and I will go down fighting, and die in the last ditch to prevent it from becoming a one-man party. . . .

"I want to make it entirely clear," he continued, "by what I have attempted to say to you that you must have someone in Washington who will not yield his honest convictions, who will not sacrifice his conscience, if you expect to remain a free people.

"I state to you that I did not name James Ford and the Communist Party in the same breath with the distinguished President for whom I hold the highest personal esteem, and I mean it when I say it.

"I said that because I want you to know that, if you are to be properly represented, you must have somebody who will not yield to the threats of the Communist Party, be it represented by Ford or anyone else. I said in plain terms, and I mean it, that I do not even mention the President of the United States in the same breath with Oliver and the communistic group in the C. I. O.; but I called your attention to their demands upon me because, if you are to remain a free people; if your factories and your places of business are not to be taken possession of unlawfully, the window glasses smashed and the machinery and furniture blown to bits, and you excluded from your own house, your own place of work, you must send somebody to Washington who has a conscience and who will follow his conscience, and who will say no to Oliver as I said on the court packing bill; as I said on the reorganization bill; as I said on the antilyncning bill.

"I say now that any man who will surrender his opinion to one man, whoever he is, when he holds it as a matter of conviction, will surrender it to another man, and to any man who can put the proper pressure upon him . . .

"In the large sense, in the true sense, I am not involved; I am not on trial, though indicted in loose and general language . . . in the deep, true sense I am not on trial, but the people of my native State, this great empire State of the South, are on trial. And you will make your answer on September 14, and I am persuaded that this generation of white Democrats in Georgia will not let democracy down in our beloved State."

Lists His Issues.

Summarizing, the Senator listed five statements as his view of the issues to be settled in Georgia's Democratic primary September 4:

"The white Democrats of Georgia are capable of choosing their own representatives.

"The character of our government demands each of the sovereign States to select its own Representatives in the House and Senate.

"The Federal power cannot be rightly used to elect and defeat any candidate in a sovereign State for any office solely in the keeping of the people of that State.

"The executive and legislative powers were ordained separate and independent of each other.

"The Democratic Party is not and cannot become a one-man party. It must allow freedom of opinion and speech if it is to remain a true liberal party."

Sen. Harrison Predicts Congress May Boost Income Tax in Middle and Lower Brackets

Tax

sharp modification of the undivided profits and capital gains taxes last session, said the 1938 tax bill has been a very helpful in improving the economic conditions of the country." He said he thought the improvement would have been greater if the modification had received more unanimous support.

The 1938 bill left only a 2½ per cent vestige of the undivided profits tax principle and applied flat tax principles to capital gains and losses. The President allowed the bill to become law without signing it and made a speech criticizing the modifications.

Harrison told reporters he had heard nothing of any attempt to revive the old 1938 undivided profits tax rates, and he believed the changes made by Congress will stand "unless we have not removed the inequities and hardships we believed we took out of the old law."

"It is impossible to tell at this time what the reaction of the country is, because there have been no collections from the new tax, and returns will not come in until March 15 next year," Harrison said. "My opinion is that Congress will continue the present undivided profits tax."

In the event it is found "we have not removed the inequities" of the old undivided profits tax law, Harrison predicted Congress will go back to the principle of flat taxation of corporations as was existing before 1936.

"Of course, I will oppose any attempt at restoration of the old undivided profits tax at the next session," Harrison said. "That is the sentiment of Congress."

He said he had accepted "reluctantly" even the 2½ per cent spread still remaining in the undivided profits tax in order to obtain other reforms, notably modification of the capital gains tax. But he said on the whole he was "satisfied" with the present tax setup.

Harrison, who conferred with the President immediately on his return here Friday, avoided any discussion of politics and made plain that the views he expressed were his own and not necessarily those of the Administration. Treasury experts have been conducting a series of tax studies but they will make their reports first to the President and to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, now in Europe.

If for no other reason, Harrison said there is need for a new tax bill next session as some nuisance taxes bringing in $200,000,000 expire on June 30, 1939. He said "at the present time it looks as though it will be necessary to extend them."

Levies on tax-exempt securities, he said, is "largely a constitutional question." The President proposed that present exemptions on Federal, State and local issues be lifted by a simple statute, but some Congressional tax authorities are insisting a constitutional amendment is necessary. A special Senate committee, headed by Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, will study pending proposals.

Harrison said it was a "big mistake" ever to have permitted issuance of tax-exempt securities.

"Of course, the Federal Government can subject its own future issues to taxation," he said, "but that would put it at a great disadvantage with the States and municipalities."

France Warns Dictatorship Is Peril to Peace

Naval Chief Cites Blessings of Democracy as Reich War Games Begin.

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Aug. 15.—A warning that dictatorship menaces the peace of the world was delivered by Cesar Campinchi, French naval minister, in inaugurating a statue of Napoleon at Ajaccio, the town in Corsica where the Emperor was born in 1769. It was the first occasion on which the Third Republic has honored the Emperor.

"Dictatorships are always born of disorder, when the nations no longer feel themselves governed, and abandon themselves to adventure . . . It is dangerous that the state should rest on the shoulders of a single man. Of course, the Democratic regimes have their weaknesses, but what are they compared with the dangers of uncontrolled power? Liberty, peace and the future are blessings two precious to be delivered up to a single man, even were he extraordinary.

Napoleon Honored Spirits' Strength.

"Let us recognize that although Napoleon owed everything to the sword, he rendered homage always to the spirit and proclaimed the impotence of might to build on durable foundations."

These words of the French minister had a special significance from the fact that they were being uttered on the day that the military maneuvers and preparations on the other side of the Rhine are making the French people nervous as to what possible warlike plans Reichfuehrer Hitler made be meditating. The semiofficial "Le Temps" tonight tried to calm the fears of the French public about the possibility of a war this year.

British Query Duce on Italy's Raids in Spain

Asks Answers to Charges Planes Bomb Loyalists in Direct Trips.

By the United Press.

London, Aug. 15.—Great Britain has asked Premier Benito Mussolini to answer allegations that Italian planes operating directly from bases in Italy are bombing Spanish ports and sinking British ships, it was disclosed today as air raiders increased their toll of British lives.

Italian planes, according to charges placed before the Rome government by British Charge d'Affaires Sir Noel Charles, start out from Italy on their bombing forays and use the insurgent Spanish Balearic Islands merely as an intermediary base for loading bombs.

Mussolini apparently has ignored the British inquiry, lodged with Italian foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, who promised to investigate the facts.

Britons learned of these charges coincident with reports from Spain that the wireless operator aoard the British steamship Hillfern was killed today in an insurgent raid on Valencia and that a British nonintervention observer and the captain of the British steamer Fredavore were wounded. At the same time another British ship was bombed and damaged in the port of Alicante.

Ebro Fight Deadlock.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (At Spanish Frontier), Aug. 15.—The battle of the Ebro Valley in South Catalonia raged through its twenty-first day today with neither the insurgents nor the Spanish government showing signs of weakness.

The government said its air force shot down 21 insurgent warplanes in a battle yesterday and lost only one of its own craft.

Japan Opens Land and Air Drive on Hankow To Forestall Threat of Soviet Aid to Chinese

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Aug. 16.—Spurred by reports that Soviet Russia is preparing to give major military assistance to China, Japanese columns today launched new assaults on the Chinese positions southeast of Hankow after their bombing planes had killed more than 1,000 Chinese in new aerial raids.

The Japanese had authoritative reports that the Soviet Ambassador to China had flown back to Hankow, after consulting with Director Josef Stalin and War Minister Klementi Voroshilov in Moscow, and that he spent the week-end with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek outlining Russian terms for the assistance which China has been asking.

The Japanese believed the Ambassador had told Stalin and Voroshilov there was danger that Chinese resistance would collapse if the Wu-Han (Wuchang, Hankow and Hanyang) area is taken by the Japanese, and urged them to find some way of preventing the impending Japanese knockout blow against Gen. Chiang's all-China anti-Japanese front.

New Clashes Expected.

The Japanese expected new clashes between their northern armies and the Russians within a month and admitted their best troops and equipment will have to be kept on the Russian borders indefinitely.

[A raging epidemic of cholera at Kiukiang has beset the Japanese in their drive up the Yangtze River toward Hankow, the Associated Press reported. Japanese surgeons were attempting to inoculate everyone at Kiukiang. The epidemic originated in contamination of wells by the bodies of Chinese dead before the fall of Kiukiang, the Japanese said.—Editor's note.]

Disptaches revealed that Japanese bombing raids yesterday and during the week-end were among the most devastating of the war.

The Hankow office received belated reports from Yangshi, 80 miles south of Hankow, saying the city virtually was destroyed by Japanese bombing planes Saturday. Fire still were raging Sunday night. There were more than 1,300 known casualties, including 500 dead.

Niehkow, 17 miles north of Hankow, was "devastated" yesterday afternoon by eight Japanese bombers which dived on a new airdrome there, destroying hangars, shops, munitions dumps and barracks. Scores of Chinese were killed when pursuit planes machine-gunned them as they were fleeing from the bomb exploision.

Earlier three Japanese pursuit planes dove on the new Hankow airdrome and machine-gunned Chinese forces on the ground. Anti-aircraft batteries were useless as the guns were set for high altitude, while the Japanese planes approched at an elevation of not more than 200 feet.

After three machine gun attacks more Japanese planes appeared and dropped bombs "ineffectively."

Canton was bombed by 19 planes as part of the Japanese "10 days bombing program," as were stations of all railways in the Canton area. Scores of casualties brought the total dead and wounded in South China during the past 10 days to an estimated 5,000.

Rail Bridge Wrecked.

Chinese positions along the Yangtze River between Kiukiang and Hankow were bombed repeatedly as were Chinese guerrilla concentrations 30 miles south of Anking.

In Shanghai British and American authorities continued preparations to thwart an expected Japanese effort to gain virtual control of the Anglo-American areas of the International Settlement on a plan that Japan must have unrestricted police rights to stamp out Chinese nationalist terrorists.

Foreign military commanders had a long conference yesterday, with the commandant of the United States Fourth Marines Regiment participating. It was understood they considered placing the Anglo-American area of the settlement under permanent semi-military control since the settlement police force is unable to control Chinese terrorists and agents of the special service division of the Japanese army who are attempting to round them up.

Costa Rica Set To Pay for U. S. Power Plants

May Expropriate Them, But Envoy Promises Cash in Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Costa Rican Minister Ricardo Castro Beeche said yesterday should his government decide to expropriate the properties of the Electric Bond & Share Co., it would make cash payment in advance.

He made the statement "to clarify any misunderstanding" that might arise from news dispatches from Costa Rica stating Congress there had authorized the Government to carry out the expropriation.

He emphasized his Government had made no decision as to whether it would take over the properties or whether some other solution could be reached.

Costa Rica, he said, was faced with the problem of expanding its power facilities to meet growing needs. For several years, he added, disagreement between company and Government representatives on ratess had made it impossible for Costa Rica to receive needed additional electric power.

If the government decided on expropriation, the Minister said, it first would name representatives to meet those appointed by the company and seek an agreement on valuation. This procedure, he explained, would be in accord with provisions of Costa Rica's constitution.

Dr. Castro Beeche visited Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday, for the second time in four days, to discuss the situation.

The envoy, who recently returned from a trip to Costa Rica, said also he was studying a new proposal to be made to the foreign bondholders council in New York, for a provisional settlement of his country's $8,000,000 bonded debt.

The Job Should Seek The Man.

As the effective date of Commissioner Allen's resignation approaches, a great deal of community interest in the selection of his successor is being manifest. The list of candidates for the position is lengthening. Some appear to have political backing. Others are being sponsored by local organizations.

This is not a case, however, in which the President can afford to name a candidate as a favor to any politician or special group. Although the people will have no direct voice in his selection, the new Commissioner will be expected to represent the community as a whole. Obviously he should be chosen for a broad knowledge of Washington's municipal problems, for courage to meet every challenge the city's makeshift government has to face and for executive ability to carry out decisions once they have been made.

If the President has only the welfare of the District in mind he will let the job seek the man instead of merely choosing one of the candidates most actively seeking the job. In filling positions of this importance to the best advantage it is frequently necessary to draft a prominent citizen who has no personal ambition for public office. There are doubtless a number of outstanding Washingtonians who would accept the commissionership as a civic responsibility, but who would make no move to forward their appointment.

It is true, of course, that the limited authority of the Board of Commissioners discourages many capable citizens from seeking these posts. But it is also true that the selection of men with courage and experience is the first step toward improvement of Washington's makeshift political system. The question of reorganizing the local government will be to the fore again in the next session of Congress. Certainly the chance of securing action will be improved if the President selects for this forthcoming vacancy a citizen who will help make possible the efficient management of the present system, while pressing for its reform.

The Hines Trial.

The trial of James J. Hines, powerful Tammany district leader, which opened before Justice Pecora in New York yesterday, marks the climax of Thomas E. Dewey's spectacular campaign to rid that metropolis of racketeering.

In this endeavor the youthful prosecutor has achieved a notable measure of success. His efforts have resulted in breaking up rackets through which the people of New York were terrorized and which mulcted them of millions paid over to gangsters and their associates. Many of the gangsters engaged in such racketeering were sent to jail. But until now none of the suspected "higher-ups," whose patronage and co-operation made it possible for the crooks to operate with immunity, has been brought to book.

The indictment last May of James J. Hines thus marked a new and extremely important stage in Mr. Dewey's campaign. Hines, a power in Tammany Hall for a quarter of a century, is charged with having been part of a gang that took over the policy lottery in Harlem by violence. He is also charged with having entered an agreement to "intimidate, influence or bribe" judicial officers in behalf of the criminal operators of this racket.

Whether Hines is guilty or not is, of course, for the jury to determine. But his indictment and trial have already raised the vital question of the relationship believed to exist in many communities between criminal elements and corrupt political systems which protect crime and batten on it. The Hines trial may, therefore, become a highly instructive seminar in one of the darkest phases of American life, one about which many suspicions exist but which is rarely illuminated by concrete facts. For Mr. Dewey and his associates probably have a considerable accumulation of evidence which they will now present in open court.

Results of the trial will be far-reaching. Aside from its bearing on the future of the now battered political machine to which Mr. Hines belongs and which, in a real sense, is as much on trial as he is, Mr. Dewey's own political future is involved. Not lacking in courage, he is risking much on the outcome. Success on this occasion would notably enhance his prestige; failure would have a decidedly adverse effect on his career.

However, the way in which the district attorney has acted from the beginning of the racket investigations until now, the painstaking preparations he has made and the sense of duty which has persistently characterized his efforts suggest clearly that the personal factor is subsidiary in his mind to the desire to render a much-needed public service.

For its dramatic aspects as well as its political significance the Hines trial will be watched with intense interest.

Export Subsidies For Wheat?

Discussion of wheat subsidies at the Department of Agriculture suggests a growing uneasiness over the gloomy outlook for this commodity. Secretary Wallace is known to look with disfavor upon subsidies of this sort. Yet his recent statements clearly indicate that he is giving serious thought to the stimulation of exports by rewarding farmers selling wheat abroad at less than domestic prices.

There is no question as to the discouraging outlook for wheat farmers. The world supply of wheat for the 1938-39 season is now estimated at 4,900,000,000 bushels and maximum requirements at something less than 4,000,000,000 bushels. Under these circumstances Secretary Wallace fears that American farmers will not be able to export more than 50,000,000 bushels without Governmental assistance. Of course, the potential surplus is having a depressing effect upon prices. With the exception of the depression period, prices are at the lowest level reached in the last 30 years.

No doubt a great deal of pressure is being applied to induce the Department of Agriculture to ameliorate the effects of this situation, by some expedient means. But the subsidization of exports is not a policy that can be temporarily adopted and then abandoned without adverse effect after surpluses have been dumped abroad. Various other countries are equally interested in disposing of their surplus wheat. Some of them already resort to subsidies. Adoption of that policy by the United States might be the signal for further spread of a vicious practice. Moreover, it would probably lead to the erection of new trade barriers by countries supplying their own wheat needs, at a time when the Department of State is making a strenuous effort to minimize trade barriers.

An extensive survey of the wheat problem by the Brookings Institution a few years ago led to the conclusion that export subsidies for this commodity had "intensified and protracted the wheat crisis, and indeed the world economic depression." The advice it offered as a result of that study is still sound:

> Competition in subsidized exports by the great exporters would be exceedingly costly to all of them, and to their wheat growers as well. . . . We, as a nation, can ill afford to experiment with using our great economic power so stupidly and so ruthlessly. We cannot wisely seek to solve our national wheat problem by methods that would make the world wheat situation worse, or that if generally adopted would make it chaotic.

A few years ago the first AAA experimented with wheat export subsidies in the Pacific Northwest. Fortunately its operations were kept on a relatively small scale. About 28,000,000 bushels of wheat were sold abroad at a cost to the Government of approximately $6,500,000. The Brookings experts concluded that "Pacific Northwest wheat growers gained less than half as much as the subsidy cost." Although growers in other areas are believed to have reaped some benefit from these operations, their net effect is to sustain the very strong economic arguments against export subsidies.

Transatlantic Crossings.

The crew of the Brandenburg, first plane to fly round trip between Germany and the United States, was surprised at the furor their arrival created both at New York and Berlin. To them it was a mere routine affair. The public, however, thought otherwise. Cheers went up for the complete precision of the performance, more than for the courage involved. The giant liner was put down at Templehof Airport within five minutes of schedule. Such accuracy denotes highly developed flying ability. It gives the sign, too, that regular transatlantic service is near at hand.

The Germans clipped almost six hours from the time of the only other New York-to-Berlin flight—Wiley Post's. The new record is 19 hours and 55 minutes. Although it may now seem impossible, there is little doubt in the minds of aviation experts that this will shortly appear as painfully slow. The first commercial substratosphere plane is soon to go into transcontinental service in this country. If its designers' hopes are realized, there is small question that similar craft will be adapted to transoceanic flying. Tightly sealed and equipped with oxygen tanks, these planes should be able to maintain extraordinary speeds by flying through the thin air of the upper sky.

With them in operation, the 20-hour record of the Brandenburg may fall into the same relative category as the 15-day time of the Great Western, one of the earliest transatlantic steamers, occupies today. Some substratosphere plane will set a mark of, say conservatively, 12 hours. Then will begin the slow nibbling of minutes and hours which has characterized the record-breaking attempts of North Atlantic liners ever since 1910 when the Mauretania made a crossing in 4 days and 10 hours. In the intervening 28 years, this time has been bettered by only 14 hours, the newest record set by the Queen Mary being 3 days and 20 hours.

However, it all seems somewhat futile. What doth it profit a man to save a few extra hours in traveling time if the customs men and others who control disembarkations are still back in the horse-and-buggy age?

Mr. George's Reply.

Senator George's reply to President Roosevelt was a dignified and restrained statement of the issue which the President's interference in the Georgia primary has raised. The Senator might have indulged in bitter recriminations. But reports of his speech indicate that he was content to draw the issue clearly, with only an occasional thrust at the President, and leave the final decision to the people.

One effect of President Roosevelt's speech at Barnesville has been to center attention upon Mr. George's record in the Senate. The Senator indicates his willingness to stand upon that record. But that is not the real issue. If he had opposed all of the New Deal proposals, the people of Georgia would nevertheless have a right to decide whether or not he should continue to be their representative in Washington. As Senator George said at Waycross, "the Federal power cannot be rightly used to elect or defeat any candidate in a sovereign State for any office solely in the keeping of the people of that State."

No doubt President Roosevelt has a strong following in Georgia. But he has put his popularity in that State to a severe test. For many Georgians are certain to agree with Senator George that "the Democratic Party is not, and cannot become, a one-man party." No other section of the country is so emphatic as the South in its determination to choose its own representatives without interference.

Reports from Georgia indicate that Senator George has little to fear from the candidate singled out as President Roosevelt's favorite. His chief competition seems to come from former Gov. Talmadge, an uncompromising foe of the New Deal. It would be ironical indeed, if the President's meddling in Georgia should result in replacement of the mild-mannered and independent thinking incumbent by Georgia's champion of panaceas.

Coca-Choler.

If this summer seems a little warmer than some others, it may be because the boys in the carbonated beverage industry have apparently not been putting up what you could call a united front against the heat menace. In fact, just after we thought Mr. Stuart Chase and Mr. Thurman Arnold had freed us from the tyranny of words, we find the captains of this industry engaged in bitter squabble over two very tiny words.

Last month the Coca-Cola Company of Canada, Ltd., succeeded in having the Pepsi-Cola Company of Canada, Ltd., restrained from selling or distributing its wares under the name "Pepsi-Cola" or indeed under any other name "calculated to cause confusion between the defendant's beverage and that of the plaintiff." Pepsi-Cola responded with a counter-attack in two sectors—in the Supreme Court of New York and in the Patent Office here. It contends that both "coca" and "cola" are descriptive names and are therefore public property.

On its side Pepsi-Cola appears to have the late Dr. Webster, at least to this extent: He describes "coca" as a South American shrub; also one of its dried leaves; also several other species of Erythoxylum; also as a variant of Koku (a Japanese measure). "Cola" he defines as a genus of African sterculiaceous trees; also as the plural form of colon, the large intestine. But Coca-Cola also calls upon no less formidable authority than the late Mr. Justice Holmes. He is quoted as saying that the name "Coca-Cola" means "a single thing coming from a single source and well known to the community."

This strikes us as a good controversy to keep out of. We cannot, however, let the occasion pass without expressing our admiration for the magnificent imperturbability of the boys in the fuel industry. So far as we know not a single squawk has yet been raised over the indisputable fact that day and night at thousands of soda fountains customers are saying, "Gimme a coke, Jerry." It is an interesting irony—is it not?—that the men whose business it is to keep us warm should be keeping themselves so cool, while the men whose business is to keep us cool should be getting themselves so hot under the cola, so to speak. Put a little ice in ours, will you, Jerry?

Women these days are shooting their husbands on too little provocation. The other day a New York woman returned from a bridge party, parked the car in the driveway and told her husband to drive it into the garage. He refused to do this, and she shot him. It seems to us that hitting him over the head with a heavy vase would have sufficed in this instance of insubordination.

A Rumford, England, thief recently stole a 150-foot brick smokestack. The owners of the remaining manufacturing plant nailed it down securely and hired a nervous nightwatchman with insomnia.

No matter how hard up the people of this country get, they always have money to burn. For proof, see sales records on tobacco and gasoline.

It is said that the machine caused most of the unemployment, but just think of the additional millions who would be unemployed if they weren't working their heads nearly off to support automobiles.

The Cotton Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reference to your editorial on the "Unsolved Cotton Problem," one can more easily see one of the results of the foolhardy experiments of the New Deal. The idea of the Administration taking over the control of the output of major crops is one of the most disastrous calamities of the Administration not only for the buyers for the crops but for the millions of workers whose families depend upon the major crops for health and life are affected.

The trouble with the present Administration is its inability to learn from experience. It has the cocksure attitude of the inexperienced theorist.

During the first five months of Roosevelt's first Administration, before socialistic theories were introduced, the business of the country, relative to major crops improved more than at any similar period throughout our entire history. But this upswing staggered and stopped with the advent of NRA, AAA and various other pieces of socialistic legislation.

If there had been intelligent consideration of these astounding indiscretions by the officials of the Administration, they would have long since discarded many of their socialistic theories.

The miraculous progress of this country was made when Government made every possible effort to encourage and not restrict and retard the farming industry, and the continuance of such advancement can be assured if the Government will at least learn how to attend to its own business and allow the cotton producing industry of the country the same privilege.

JACK RUSSEL DUNN.

Milk Bottles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The manufacturers of paper containers for milk have been working night and day for at least two years to sell or force the idea of replacing our transparent and satisfactory glass milk bottles with their product. This would greatly increase the revenue of the manufacturers, therefore the secondary question of whether the consumer desires to make such a change will doubtless be of minor importance.

As a consumer, permit me to state that I wish to see what I am buying, especially in the instance at point. It is in the consumer's best interest for there to be no concealment of the exact status of the milk on which his family depends and one of the best means to this end is eliminated where either sight, smell or taste is obscured.

Moreover, since one method of making paper is with rags (else why the rag man?) and since even strong paper cartons are not indefinitely resistant to moisture, it is reasonable to object to it as a receptacle for the daily milk supply.

The first thing we know we'll wake up and find that another undesired innovation has been "wished onto us" by clever salesmanship.

"Stop Killing."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is no doubt a small percentage of reckless people in whose hands an automobile becomes not a useful instrument, but a destructive and fatal one. No law is too severe for that kind. However, the greatest majority of offenders brought before the bar of justice are petty violators.

It seems to me that the following would do a great deal to help the situation.

1. More playgrounds to accommodate all the small children of the city.
2. Instructors in these playgrounds capable of instructing the children concerning the dangers that beset them from all directions.
3. An educational campaign through the newspapers, movies, radio, schools, churches, and civic and fraternal organizations.
4. Posters inscribed "Stop Killing All Over Town." Last but not least a severe test of applicants for drivers' permits, not only a written test but an actual driving test through heavy traffic and not just around the block. There may be lots more that can be said and done, but if we succeed in educating the parents and children, if we take the reckless drivers off the streets by revoking their permits forever, and if we reward by honorable mention those drivers that really do drive safely and sanely, I'm sure we will avoid all avoidable accidents and set an example for the whole country.

SAMUEL SHINBERG.
Washington, Aug. 9.

"Speedmonitors" Wanted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Who will finance an experiment in life-saving? If the District through its new traffic safety committee, or an interested private citizen, will volunteer a sum of money, I propose to have constructed and sold at cost a number of speedometers to be mounted on the rear of cars of co-operative drivers. These instruments would be of such size as to be easily read by the nearer cars in traffic, by the citizen on the sidewalk and by the policeman on the beat. Let the numbers approach the size of those on the license plates.

The purpose of the device is to expose the speeders. We can assume that the citizen willing to carry the device on his car would observe the speed limits. By reference to the dial carried by this "speedomonitor" "he who runs might read" the relative speeds of all other cars in the traffic. With a considerable percentage of citizens capable of reading license numbers and reporting to police, the potential difficulties facing the speed demons might deter them until they get to the great open spaces. Old Age Pensions.

Science and collective experience have now so greatly increased production that there is no longer any need for labor by youth and by age.

The advocates of economic slavery say that there is not enough money in the country for the pensions, but it is easy to see that such an argument is mere evasion of a bitter subject. It is not a question of "money" at all, but a matter of collective production, and a businesslike distribution of the proceeds.

It is a function of government to supply enough currency to measure and keep liquid the production of the national unit.

Life should be divided up into three periods. Youth for education; manhood for work and age for leisure. It is just a natural step along the road of democracy.

Rooseveltians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An organization is under way in Virginia's Eighth Congressional District, that will have for its purpose fostering the ideals of Thomas Jefferson, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt. Hon. William E. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany and other pro-Roosevelt Democrats are interested in the movement. The organization is not a third term group. It is for the purpose of backing the Administration for the next two years or more.

The President And Senator George

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The opinion expressed in The Post editorial "Upon What Meat" that President Roosevelt in urging the defeat of Senator George of Georgia is exceeding the ethical if not legal boundaries of his office and is attemping through Federal pressure to deprive the American people of local self government, is a gross overstatement of a natural development in present day politics.

Until recently "outside interference" in local elections was the prerogative of the railroads, public utilities and that nebulous something known as Wall street. For example, we had the Liberty League financing certain undercover, anti-Roosevelt movements in the Southern States and the Republican National Committee (unofficially, of course) nominating the obscure Grocer Norris in Nebraska.

If a President with propriety may urge the election of his own party members to the Congress on the grounds of co-operation with his program may he not with equal propriety demand the defeat of that membership which attempts to circumvent this program?

Is there any essential difference between the Presidential indorsement of Senator Norris to Nebraska voters in 1936 and his repudiation of Senator George to Georgia voters in 1938?

The office of President combines the dual functions of the head of the Nation and the leadership of party. In Great Britain from whom we borrowed our democracy these functions are divided, the King being the head of the state, the premier leader of the majority party.

Had the British premier met with a defeat in the House of Commons such as Mr. Roosevelt experienced in reorganization, new elections would have been called and the people given the opportunity to pass on the merits of the controversy. However, because of our more rigid system our premier, the President, must wait until the Congressional elections to secure the public's verdict. To present the issue to the electorate is the duty of the party leader.

How much genuine democracy is there in Georgia with its county unit system, its disfranchisement of thousands of poor whites and Negroes? In 1932 Georgia, with approximately 1,000,000 eligible white voters, cast a total of 254,000 votes, less than Rhode Island.

There is something fundamentally unsound in Georgia. Although fourteenth in population, it stands among the States twenty-eighth in school expenditures, ninth in death rate, lowest in population increase between 1920 and 1930, thirty-eighth in literacy among whites and forty-sixth in per capita wealth.

The plight of Georgia and the entire South is due to its paucity of leadership. If the President through his personal leadership can rid this section of its Georges, its Cotton Ed Smiths and its Bilbos, can awaken the South to new leadership geared to its needs and national in its viewpoint, he will have done a service not only for this unfortunate section but for America as a whole. JOSEPH BLAGBURN.
Washington, Aug. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your rather spacious editorial in The Washington Post of Saturday, August 13, was indeed quite interesting. Much of what you say is quite true. There are, however, a few facts which we must consider before maligning the President because he is brave, courageous and fearless enough to express openly his honest conviction in a matter pertaining to the welfare of the Nation. America, and even Georgia, must face the cold and undeniable realization that today, in a world seething with unrest, it must develop a strong centralized Government dedicated to the protection and welfare of all of its citizenry if it hopes to survive in this present era of world-wide chaos.

Reforms which are imperative to the welfare and to the very existence of the Nation cannot be instituted with such reactionaries and obstructionists as Senator George in the Capitol. His fight on the wage-hour bill is in itself sufficient to disqualify him for such high office.

From an ideal viewpoint a Senate of "Charlie McCarthys" is not to be desired and is distasteful to those of us who feel that our democratic form of government, State's rights, etc., is not to be tampered with. We must realize, however, that America to survive must be guided by strong centralized authority. President Roosevelt has demonstrated such leadership from the hour he first took the oath of office.

What the future holds for us no one can foretell when once the reins of Government are relinquished to another less courageous. However, I fear.

Music, Sweet Music.

WHEN the multitudes at the Watergate lose themselves in rapture, I too am lost, not so much in the music as in the fascination of watching musicians. I am intoxicated, with wonder at the apparent simplicity and ease with which ten fingers, or two lungs, or both, can coax such combinations of sound from old wood, old brass, from

> " . . . The entrails of the agile cat,
> The tail of the noble horse."

For me, alas, it is a mystery from whose face the veil will never be lifted. But this is not because I have never tried to lift it. My early years were apprenticed to the art of music and dedicated to filling this earth with melody.

My initiation occurred at the age of six when a teacher bearing the standard of a new musical cult came to our town bringing with her what was known as a Method, cunningly devised to ensnare even the most ungifted of children. But the author of this unique system reckoned without me. I emerged from the series of lessons for which my father enrolled me the possessor of one lone fact. This was the oddly alluring name bestowed on one of the notes. It was called "Tumbledown D," though why or how I am still unable to comprehend. Even my uncritical eye could see that that note was immovable.

My next teacher was of sterner stuff, probably because he was a man, but more likely because he resented wasting time on so unpromising a pupil. Twice weekly I was admitted to his close, overfurnished parlor and faced a keyboard of formidable dimensions though the instrument itself held a degree of fascination. Unlike our own, it was upright and it wore a deep, heavy bertha of Battenberg lace that endowed it with dignity. Most entrancing of all, and lending gay contrast to the dignified lace, was the assortment of objects that clustered on the top.

These, it seems, had been brought from the St. Louis World's Fair. I was never allowed to handle these treasures though, for the Professor (the title was his by courtesy) was always beside me importuning me to get on with the lesson, assailing my clumsiness, or counting time in his edgy voice. Sometimes he drew unflattering comparisons between my renditions and those of his small daughter, younger than I and who could play, oh, so prettily. This tutelage ended abruptly when the Professor removed himself and family and his souvenirs to another town.

But my respite was not for long. My sister, only a few years older than myself, played many difficult compositions with distinction and talent. Hers was no laborious, no studied, stolid punching out of sound. Clear, rippling harmonies sprang out beneath her fingers like plants after spring rain. What her teacher had done for her could be done for me, my father reasoned; and I was accordingly placed under the instruction of this competent woman.

After long drilling I was one day able to play such airs as "Sing, Brothers, Sing," and "Oh, Music, Music, Thou Art My Heart's Delight!" No heart ever belied the truth of that title more fiercely than mine, no fingers ever pounded out the notes with more leaden emphasis.

My sister, I have said, was an accomplished pianist. She was more than that. She had a talent for making a gracious appearance. When visitors were present, or when she was called upon to play in public, she would advance with aplomb and cheerful readiness. She would sit blithely on the stool, rise, give the stool a few twirls both up and down, sink back on the now well-adjusted seat, spread her pleated skirts until they fell in graceful, fanlike folds over the small pedestal, fluff back her fair curls, perk up her hair ribbons and then ripple her fingers over the keyboard.

But no one was interested in hearing me play "Oh, Music, Sweet Music." I was never called to the parlor to display my wares when visitors came. And as for playing in public——! One winter our teacher decided to give a "musicale" where her own luster would be subdued so that the incandescence of her pupils might burst in full glory on that portion of the townfolk fortunate enough to have been invited.

As usual success attended her. The parents were a shining half-moon of compressed pride on one side of her drawing room. On the other side were the guests, radiating benignity like soft-lit lamps. In between shone those rays of purest light, her pupils.

Amid all this brilliance there was one cloud, one shadow. It hovered over my father who had just learned that I was not numbered among the performers. The teacher had taken him aside and explained with tact that she could hardly present me in "The Dance of the Elves," especially as my sister was playing Grieg's "Butterfly."

After that, even my father grew disheartened. Perhaps, he admitted, all the money might be put to better use. So my musical career perished at the hands that had never really learned to distinguish between B flat and F sharp. But, it was not without one lingering regret.

I did want to twirl that stool before an audience just once and then seat myself all poised to play.

Liar's Licenses.

SHERMAN MINTON, the New Deal Senator from Indiana, made a speech to the American Press Society Saturday in defense of his proposal to muzzle the press under a pretense of penalizing those who knowingly publish untruths.

There was an interesting play about 20 years ago called "Nothing But the Truth" which thoroughly proved that it is impossible for any human being to avoid telling a deliberate lie in the course of a normal day's intercourse with his fellow men. United States Senators were not specifically dealt with in the play but were included by implication.

However, the play could have digressed to point out that the group of which Senator Minton is a member, the body of lawmakers in this country, is the only element in our society that requires a special law to permit such men as Mr. Minton to lie wantonly, viciously and scurrilously without fear of any penalty. And it need not be pointed out, either, that the members of this group have liberally availed themselves of this privilege, often to the great injury of innocent citizens and groups, in utterances which they knew to be complete lies and which they would not have dared repeat in premises where their parliamentary privilege to lie and slander would not stand between them and legal punishment.

* * * *

"I SUGGESTED," he said, in explanation of his attempt to muzzle the press for opposition to the reorganization bill, "that to print a lie willfully and knowingly should be as great a crime as selling poison food or selling fake stocks."

There are penalties already, however, for the willful publication of false information in most circumstances. But Senator Minton personally enjoys a right not only to tell lies on the floor but to publish them in the Congressional Record, a document so mendacious, scurrilous and slanderous that the press which he attacks for lying long ago learned to quote from it only with extreme caution lest culpable libel be done. It is recognized in the newspaper business that, because the members of Congress have and exercise a right to lie and to publish their lies in the Record, the Record is a dangerous source of direct or even of indirect quote.

The lay press enjoys no such immunity as that which protects the Senators and Congressmen and the little family journal that they employ to give wider and more permanent circulation to any slander they may care to utter in cowardice and wanton violation of the known truth. Senator Minton and his colleagues in the legislative bodies, alone of all the American Nation, are privileged to lie without restraint, and to say that they do not overwork the privilege would be to print a lie willfully and knowingly—a very serious offense in the Senator's view.

* * * *

"I DO NOT believe that the Constitution or those who framed it ever intended it to be used as a defense for the liar and slanderer," said the statesman who holds a liar's license from the people of Indiana. And to this I would add, in very serious vein, that the theory of Congressional immunity was not intended for that purpose either. It was intended to give the statesman a free tongue in the expression of views and information they believed to be true, on the sadly discredited theory that they would bring to their office the honesty, courage and character which that privilege bespoke.

To paraphrase Senator Minton, "The Congressional immunity and those who framed it did not intend it to be used as a defense for the liar and slanderer," but if he denies that it is habitually so used then he is flouting the very restraints which he would impose on publishers who knowingly trifle with the truth.

* * * *

AND NOW, if Senator Minton will suggest how he and his colleagues can be punished for abuse of their parliamentary immunity from the consequences of willful lies and slander, he will point the way to enforcement of his proposal against the press.

"I learned from the great newspaper publishers," said Senator Minton, "that they claim the Constitutional right to deliberately lie and that you cannot run a newspaper without lying deliberately."

That would be important if true, although its truth is not established by the mere word of a man who holds a legal license to slander and lie. But it is at least equally important to realize that, to paraphrase the Senator again:

"Senators claim the legal right to deliberately lie and that you cannot run the United States Congress without lying deliberately."

Postoffice to Try Pick-up of Rural Mail by Planes

By the Associated Press.

The Postoffice Department is going to give inventors a chance to prove that non-stop rural air mail service is practicable.

Bids will be opened at the department September 15 on four "experimental" routes. The planes must be equipped with special devices for delivering and picking up mail while in flight.

One device, already demonstrated to postal officials, dropped a mail sack at the end of a thin wire which automatically was severed when the sack touched the ground. The plane picked up mail by catching a hook on a line extended between two poles.

The experimental routes will be between Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Huntington, W. Va., and other cities in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

Youth's Task

It Alone Can Restore To The World The Precious Human Values Now All But Lost In Gathering Terrors.

(Following are excerpts from the address of Assistant Secretary of State Adolph A. Berle, jr., last night before the second World Youth Congress in New York.)

PASSIONATE BEYOND MEASURE, today, is the desire of free peoples for a world free from fear. This means a world of order, in which humanity accepts a rule of reason, law and morals, and not of force. Amid thickening mists of terror, certain great problems have emerged. They are before you today, and will be before you in the deliberations at your conference.

If peoples are to have free intercourse, there must be a basis for it. For example, you could not be here, you could not freely exchange ideas, if your effects could be arbitrarily confiscated, your bodies imprisoned at will, or your freedom of speech curtailed. In making effective international co-operation which brings all nations into a community, and which extends the policy of the good neighbor to the entire world, there must be agreement on certain elementary principles. Civilized intercourse becomes impossible without certain guarantees of elementary individual rights, maintained with order, and protected by law. Not otherwise can groups of individuals like yourselves freely meet and freely make decisions. Lacking such guarantees, men can speak to men only from behind a screen of weapons; and ultimately, they cannot speak at all.

The world has rightly come to realize that the strongest voice which can be raised in the agony of indecision prevailing today must be the voice of youth. That voice speaks to the future; and it can also give hope to the present. By it is carried the word which builds a bridge from the old order to the new; which can set in motion forces to undo the mistakes of the past; which can state without fear the needs of a world which must be reborn. So powerful is the voice and so potent its word, that the world itself will listen.

* * * *

THAT VERY STRENGTH leads me to sound a note of warning. The voice of youth is so powerful that many groups which are not so young, many forces which are not so innocent, and many interests which are not so unselfish, are all too anxious to appropriate that voice for their own ends. War today is not limited to armed conflict. A recognized and known part of warfare is the endeavor to gather and to use the forces of opinion and organization wherever they can be found. Manipulators of those forces are at work today in every part of the earth, seeking to guide, manipulate, persuade, or deceive great groups into following lines designed to forward selfish ends. With the militarist there is always the propagandist, and he follows the same practices, has the same objectives, and pursues the same aims.

Naturally, self-seeking groups in the world have sought to influence and appropriate for ulterior purposes the enthusiasm of youth. Naturally, this fact is known by every skilled observer of movements and events, of whom there are many here tonight. The art of determining whether any statement is spontaneous or whether it merely reflects hidden influences or propaganda, is highly developed. Naturally, everything you do will be analyzed to discover whether the voice that speaks is your own, or whether you have been used by less scrupulous forces.

If ever youth allows itself to be used as a tool by an interest or power or group, its influence at once disappears. The drama which follows is the tragedy of a lost generation.

* * * *

YOU KNOW that the world is an armed camp; and that your generation is even now in the valley of the shadow of death. You know that you, especially, are marked for that inglorious slaughter of body and spirit which modern war means. You know that the youth and joy you represent have enemies on every side. Yet you are trustees for the happiest voice, and as time flows, the only voice, to which we can listen. You act under a fearful obligation. You must scrupulously keep faith with the millions of your contemporaries who require that you represent them, and no one else. You must be ever on guard and capable in your watch against the many groups who seek to use you, not to forward the ideals of youth, but to forward some unspoken aim of power, ambition or conquest. Speak then, for yourselves, your kindred and your kind.

THE WORLD ORDER which some of us knew before it was shattered in 1914 had many faults. But it had one great virtue. There were rules which were generally accepted; and there was a basis by which communication could be carried on in relative security. The unit was the individual. He could contribute the best of his heart and his head; he could communicate the result of his thinking and his work; and he could do this throughout the entire civilized earth. It was realized that, if he were subjugated or enslaved, if his words, his thoughts and his achievements were dictated by fear of a master, they might be temporarily useful, but they were valueless in the great process of civilization. For that reason there was a recognized body of world-wide rights, all designed to accomplish a simple purpose; the free passage of individuals between nation and nation. This was the great contribution which had brought the modern world out of the medieval stagnation, and which made possible the vision of a great world community. Indeed, the very conference is an endeavor to pursue that vision.

For that reason you must concern yourselves with rebuilding of international rights, based on justice and common sense, which will continue to permit the kind of historical process which brings you here. This conflicts with certain ideas unhappily afloat today. It conflicts for example, with the idea of a closed nation which is called autarchy. It conflicts with the idea that no individual is entitled freely to use his own mind. It conflicts with the theory that the individual soul must be merged in a directed herd. Our elders, despite their failures, did know certain things; and one of them was that all government, national and international, resolves itself into men; and that these men are human and are subject both to the good and the evil forces to which men in power may yield. They knew that, in the last analysis, men had only one choice—freedom or slavery—and they knew that, in the latter case, one master was as bad as another. Internationally, at least, they endeavored to protect freedom of communication, and to give it a basis by guarding individuals from certain elementary oppressions. They did this in the not unfounded hope that thereby the world at large might benefit from the contributions which every nation and kind can make to civilization as a whole.

That order of things has been, in large measure, underminded. Your presence here is evidence of a hope that it be restored In your thought you must consider what is needed, so that it can be rebuilt; what rights must be recognized by all nations to liberate the genius of youth in its search for a peaceful, a happy and a progressive world. You may find, as did our fathers, that the right to differ is as important as the right to agree. You may possibly discover that, while it is easy to talk about abstractions, you eventually must talk to men. It may even appear, indeed, that the thought of centuries in these matters is not to be wholly discarded; and that it is out of an old field that the new corn must grow. In a dark hour, not unlike our own, a great European and a great poet looked deeply into the chaos of a shattered world. He spoke to the unconquerable heroism of the human mind; and Goethe's words ride, winged down the years:

"The beautiful world trembles and falls;
A half God has shattered it
* * * Thou
Mighty among the sons of the earth
Capable
Built it anew;
In thine own soul built it once more;
With clear spirit begin a new life's course;
Sing to the world a new song."

I am sure I speak for my Government in saying that we look forward to the results of your deliberations with the highest hope. In the various countries where I have been I have seen nothing more gallant than the attempts of youth to regenerate the life around them; nothing more splendid than the willingness to join friendly hands with their contemporaries throughout the world. In seeking the common ground on which all can meet, youth is facing the great issue in the world today. That issue is whether or not there shall be recognized throughout the world the essential individuality of the individual human soul; and the universal duty to build for that soul a mansion in which all souls can reach their greatest fulfillment.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The German Military Preparations.

SHORTLY BEFORE the King and Queen came to Paris in the third week of July, information had begun to seep through from Germany that military preparations were being hastened and intensified with exceptional energy. It was known that the conscription of labor had been established by decree and that workers were being drafted from Austria and from various parts of Germany in order to construct by forced labor at high pressure a deep fortified zone, known as the Siegfried Line, facing the French frontier. This was followed by reports that Gen. Goering, who now directs the German military economy, was taking exceptional measures, exceptional in their tempo, to make the newly acquired economic resources of Austria available to the Reich.

About a fortnight ago it then transpired that the regular summer army maneuvers were to be extraordinarily elaborate this year, amounting in substance to a considerable, though not a total, mobilization. And it was realized that all these measures taken together would culminate and become effective at the time Lord Runciman's mission was likely to reach the decisive point and at a time also when the National Socialist Congress would be having its annual meeting in Nuremberg.

* * * *

THESE EVENTS are the reason for the state of intense vigilance which prevails in London and in Paris, and indeed in all the chancelleries of Europe. For it is evident that in the course of the next few weeks Hitler will find himself, with his armaments at a hair trigger, faced once more with the great decision. Naturally, every effort is being made to sound out his intentions. The most credible reports are that he does not want war now, and that men like Gen. Ian Hamilton are describing the situation accurately when they come back from seeing him to say that he is working for peace, but that he must not "be provoked."

This report is credible because it seems fairly well established that after the check of May 21 in which Hitler showed himself to be prudent, there remained a war party among the Nazis which has argued that the allies were bluffing and that it would have been safe to proceed against Czechoslovakia. It would seem that this division of opinion within the Nazi regime has been allayed during the summer by the decision to prepare more elaborately and intensely for the next Czechoslovak crisis. So, if and when the crisis comes, the more moderate party in Germany will not be able to argue that the western defenses are weak, that the army is not yet ready. Indeed, it may well be argued this autumn that Germany will have reached the highest point of military efficiency of which she is capable, given her present resources.

* * * *

IT MAY WELL BE, in fact it is rather probable, that Hitler is more than ever desirous of peace precisely because he realizes that the situation is developing in a way which makes it extremely difficult for him to find convincing reasons for not risking a war. Hitler is a very good judge, surely the best in Germany, of what risks it is possible to take, and it must be evident to him that the risks are greater today than they were in May. For, as compared with May, when the Austrian triumph was still fresh, the Nazi pressure behind him today is greater and the allied resistance in front of him is greater. And the question is how to find a way out of a situation in which irresistible forces from within Germany are threatening to collide with immovable forces outside Germany.

Under these circumstances the task of the diplomats is just about as subtle and complicated as any that men have had to undertake. Faced with fundamentally irreconcilable claims in the Czech-German problem, they have to try to find a formula and an arrangement which postpones the decisive issue for a few months. The prestige of all the nations concerned is almost completely involved. For Hitler cannot accept a defeat or anything which would be interpreted as a defeat. And the allies cannot connive at a surrender without risking the complete disintegration of all their alliances. For prestige in Europe means that one becomes strong by appearing to be strong; one acquires supporters by convincing them that they are joining the winning side. Prestige, therefore, is not a matter of personal vanity, but of political and military power, and the critical fact about Central Europe today is that the issue of prestige is coming to its climax in a state of hair-trigger mobilization.

* * * *

THUS THE SITUATION is undoubtedly serious. It is not, however, desperate. There remains the probable fact that Hitler himself, and with him a large party in Germany, almost certainly realize that war is too great a gamble. The Franco-British alliance is very firm, and represents a much more formidable coalition than the Rome-Berlin axis. For Italy is a weak ally, perhaps a liability rather than an asset, and Japan is caught in the quicksands of China. The little frontier war in Manchuria has been more impressive than European opinion has thought it prudent to admit. For it seems to show, whatever the truth may actually be, that in spite of the purges Russia is not a negligible power. Whereas a year ago the Russians showed no resistance when the Japanese sank their gunboat on the Amur, in the recent affair they went out of their way to make a show of force. And then there is reason to think that in Central Europe, in the Balkans, and among the smaller Mediterranean powers, British diplomacy has been quite effective.

Thus there is so considerable an alignment of defensive forces that it is possible to hope that the crisis of the autumn may be safely passed.

The Modern Geography Class. No. 2.

TEACHER—Scholars, we will now take up our geography lesson. Willie, have you your geography ready?

WILLIE—Yes ma'am, but it's not much good to me.

TEACHER—Why not?

WILLIE—It's nearly a year old.

* * * *

TEACHER—Frederick, can you tell me where Prague is?

FREDERICK—No ma'am. I haven't heard from Europe this morning.

* * * *

TEACHER—Charlie Smith, can you locate Czechoslovakia?

CHARLIE—No, and neither can Czechoslovakia!

* * * *

TEACHER—What is the largest city in Germany?

WILLIE—Vienna.

TEACHER—Vienna isn't in Germany.

WILLIE—That shows how far behind you are in your newspaper reading, teacher.

* * * *

TEACHER—George Steukel, can you bound Siberia?

GEORGE—Not at a time like this.

TEACHER—But can't you give me a rough idea?

* * * *

ARTHUR—Name 'em? I can't recognize 'em.

TEACHER—What form of government have the Japanese people?

ARTHUR—That's what the Japanese people are beginning to wonder.

TEACHER—Who is the King of Italy?

ARTHUR—All I know is he is a short man and somebody is always standing in front of him in the pictures.

* * * *

WILLIE—The Danube.

TEACHER—You mean the Rhine, don't you?

WILLIE—Let's not be too technical.

* * * *

TEACHER—Peter Herple, can you give me the boundaries of Manchukuo and Korea?

PETER—Certainly not.

TEACHER—Why?

PETER—All I have is a geography; what I need to answer that question is the last Associated Press dispatch.

* * * *

WILLIE—The Potomac.

TEACHER—The Potomac doesn't run through Kentucky.

WILLIE—Then how did they ship all that money down there?

King Log?

Here is an old man now, sitting in Holland waiting for the end. And all of us think of him kindly these days, as simply a rather pleasant old fellow who once upon a time sat upon the throne that Adolf Hitler occupies now. But we have not always thought of him kindly. Back in 1917 we hated him as cordially as we have ever hated a man, and pictured him as a sort of understudy to Satan. But we have found out since that, while he was far from guiltless in the making of the World War, he was no worse than many others, and that his main fault was not brutality but stupidity. And his successor, Hitler, has pretty well convinced us that a Hohenzollern wasn't necessarily the worst sort of ruler on earth.

Maybe we had better keep his case in mind, too, while we are about the judging of the current scene in the world. If we hated too easily and not quite altogether justly once, we could do it again.

A Double Plague

By Mark Sullivan

Beetles And Agent.

Avondale, Chester County, Pa.

HERE on the farm, the Japanese beetles have destroyed about 10 per cent of our corn. Last year they destroyed much more. That was our first experience with them, so this year we tried to outfox them.

We observed that the beetles arrive about July 10 and leave about August 13. Those are the weeks during which the corn is in silk, and it is by the silk that the grains of corn are pollenized and come into being. The Japanese beetles eat the silk. But this year we planted the corn late, so that it would not come to silk until after the beetles left. To a considerable extent our strategy succeeded. During the early weeks of the beetles' visit they went into the cornfield, flew and crawled about in search of silk tassels, found none, and left the field with a manner of indignant disappointment. But during the last few days of their stay, much of the corn was coming into silk, and they destroyed some of it.

We are a little sad about it. We realize we will have to buy some feed for the cattle during the winter. Nevertheless I suppose we ought not to speak of it as a calamity. I suppose we ought to see it as a benevolent act of nature. It must be benevolent because it amounts to the same thing Secretary Wallace does. He requires farmers to reduce their acreage of corn by about 10 per cent. If reduction by Government fiat is beneficient, then reduction by Japanese beetles must be beneficent too. If Mr. Wallace says reduction is good, then we can't say our particular reduction is bad, can we? That would hardly be proper respect for a Government official.

True, Mr. Wallace's reduction and the beetles' reduction are not the same. Mr. Wallace accomplishes his reduction, this year, by preventing us from planting—we are saved the labor of plowing and harrowing and hoeing and weeding. But the beetles' reduction is exactly comparable to some of the reductions Mr. Wallace accomplished a few years ago—plowing under cotton and killing little pigs and pregnant sows.

* * * *

I OUGHT to say, too, that here in Pennsylvania Mr. Wallace did not impose any corn quotas on us. The corn quotas were imposed only in the 12 States of the Central West cornbelt. But wheat limitation, Mr. Wallace is going to impose on all of us, in every State. He has done it without any referendum—there hasn't been any referendum around here. But from an announcement made July 21, we learn that Pennsylvania must reduce its acreage of wheat from 1,093,000 this year to 772,659 next year. The quotas for individual farms will come along in a little while. Some day within a few weeks, I assume, somebody acting with authority delegated by Mr. Wallace will come up our lane and hand us an official card telling us how much wheat we will be allowed to plant in October. The wheat reduction is severe, about a third in the country as a whole, from 81,000,000 acres in 1938 to 55,000,000 acres next year. Mr. Wallace is going to be, almost literally, the man who made two grains of wheat grow where three grew before.

As between the visit we expect from Mr. Wallace's agent and the visit we have had from the Japanese beetles, we prefer, on the whole, the beetles. After all, we are free to fight the beetles, get rid of them any way we can. And we have confidence that one way or another we will beat them.

Mr. Wallace's Department of Agriculture, in one of the many extremely useful scientific activities it carries on, is trying to find a parasite that will kill the Japanese beetles. They say there is a parasite, a bug, that lights on the beetle's back, goes to the joint between his body and head, sinks a borer into the beetle's inwards, and there lays an egg which proceeds to hatch and eat the insides of the beetle. We wish that grewsome parasite well, and we hope Mr. Wallace's Department of Agriculture will find still other bugs that kill beetles. Mr. Wallace is good about bugs.

It will take a good many bugs and parasites to kill the beetles off. In numbers they are enormous. The other morning early, while the beetles were still a little chilly and damp and inert, I shook a small cherry tree. The beetles that dropped off covered the ground.

Mobilization

By Barnet Nover

Germany's War Games.

THE undeclared war has become a commonplace of our times. Now, perhaps, we shall also have to get accustomed to undeclared mobilizations as well.

Mobilization was a very serious business in the old days. It was, at the very least, the prelude to the actual outbreak of hostilities. Many held, in fact, that an order to mobolize was, certainly so far as the great powers were concerned, tantamount to a declaration of war.

That is one reason why apologists for the Kaiser's Reich insist that it was Russia not Germany which must be blamed for having started the World War. Of the two nations, Russia was the first to mobilize. When that happened, it is said, Germany had no alternative but to declare war on her gigantic eastern neighbor.

* * * *

IN THOSE DAYS mobilization was a recognizable development. There was nothing particularly secret about it. The details might, for obvious reasons, be kept from the public gaze; the broad fact that the nation was mobilizing was, on the other hand, proclaimed from all the housetops.

But the past quarter of a century has seen a marked change in this particular as in so many others. For one thing, many of the attributes of mobilization that were of an emergency nature have now become a permanent part of the scene in some countries. That is certainly true of censorship in Czarist Russia and in the Second Reich before the World War. But not until those nations plunged into conflict did such censorship become all-embracing. In the totalitarian states of today, however, complete and drastic censorship is a permanent aspect of the regime.

But that is only one of many particulars in which the totalitarian states can be said to be permanently mobilized for war. Conscription not only for military service but also for industry is now being carried out in Germany and there, as in Italy and Japan, the economic structure of the nation is to an increasing degree being twisted to fit the needs of the military machine and to take care of those needs alone.

* * * *

HOWEVER, the primary purpose of mobilization as that term is generally understood is to unite in military formations all or a large part of the trained manpower of the nation.

On the basis of this definition, therefore, it can be said that hitherto no great power has ever mobilized without some admittedly warlike end in view. But Germany is now presenting the unique spectacle of a mobilization which officials vehemently deny is the prelude to war and which they also insist is not a mobilization at all.

Maybe it isn't. But it certainly looks like it. An unknown number of reservists, estimated at between 500,000 to 1,000,000, has been called to the colors. The frontier regions have been closed to visitors, particularly those having any connection with foreign armies. Horses and motor cars have been requisitioned. All leaves for railwaymen have been canceled and citizens have been notified to be in readiness to place their property at the disposal of the Reichswehr.

* * * *

THE REASON given by German authorities for all these moves by the government is that after several years of intensive rearmament Germany feels it necessary to test out its military machine. Says the Berliner Post, for instance:

"If it is the first time closed reserve formations will participate in these exercises it is due to the fact that universal military service has been decreed only a few years, hence an opportunity has presented itself only now, for the first time, of following the general example of other great powers, which regularly use reserve formations in maneuvers."

The argument happens to be a plausible one. But it does not change the fact that soon Germany will have at one time in regular military formations a larger number of men than she has had since the end of the World War and that this aggregation of force is the largest to be found in any other nation of Europe with the possible single exception of Soviet Russia.

* * * *

IT IS HARDLY surprising, then, that German assurances that she means no harm by this concentration of armed might are being accepted with a grain of salt.

During the next six weeks the German army of a million may limit its activities to war games, as announced. But there is clearly no certainty of this. At any rate the impending display of the Third Reich's military powers can be used to put pressure on her neighbors.

At Prague a diplomatic poker game is being played for huge national and international stakes. The cards have not yet been dealt; the betting has not yet begun. One of the players, Germany, appears disinclined to wait. She has taken out her six-shooter and is waving it about. But in Berlin Herr Goebbels insists that (1) the pistol isn't a pistol at all; (2) that it isn't loaded; and (3) that it isn't being aimed at anybody.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

The question of retirements, one of the most controversial issues among Federal employes, is a subject well known to John S. Beach, former chief of the retirement division, Bureau of Pensions. Mr. Beach has prepared an article on the subject titled "Thirty Years Service Retirement," which will be printed here in two installments, beginning:

There are three distinct schools of thought on the subject of retirement after having rendered 30 years of service for the Government, as follows:

(1) Retirement at the option of the employe irrespective of the attained age.

(2) Retirement at the option of the employe upon having attained a certain specified age. The present law provides for optional retirement at 62, 65 and 68 years for respective age groups.

(3) Retirement upon attaining the age of 60 years or thereafter, optional either with the employe or the Government.

Between 1900 and 1917 sporadic attempts were made to secure retirement legislation. Many bills were introduced in Congress differing widely in their provisions. Hearings were held, and in a few instances favorable reports were made by the committees handling the proposed legislation, but no law was enacted. Finally, in April, 1917, the joint conference on retirement was organized and from that time until the original retirement law was enacted on May 22, 1920, there was concerted action by the organized employes which culminated successfully.

During this period of more than 20 years there practically was no discussion of retirement based upon 30 years' service. Efforts were concentrated upon securing a law which primarily would provide retirement on an annuity for superannuated employes. This was the crying need in the Government service. Interwoven with this fundamental principle for retirement was the necessity for making provision also for those who become totally disabled before reaching superannuation as defined for the various age groups, which was 62, 65 and 70 years. And so the original law provided for retirement under two conditions only, viz—superannuation and disability.

It was not long after the passage of the act of May 22, 1920, when the employes began to agitate the question of retirement after 30 years' service. Their consensus was that such retirement would be solely at the option of the employe and irrespective of his attained age. It was easy to work up enthusiasm for such a plan. Little or no consideration was given to the ultimate increase in the cost of the system. Most of the employes were not willing to concede that the Government had any right of determination in the matter.

As time went on, the organized employes in their conventions passed many resolutions expressing their views on the subject of 30 years' service retirement; bills were introduced in Congress and actuarial estimates were obtained, but for nearly ten years no legislative action was taken. It was found that the added cost would be prohibitive, and there also developed a very substantial opposition among administrative officials and sound thinkers who believed that early retirements were not in the interest of the service.

Finally, on May 29, 1930, a law was enacted which included retirement, optional with the employe after 30 years of service, at 60, 63 and 68 years of age, for the respective age groups. While this law established the principle of retirement after 30 years' service, yet because of the relative high age for each group and because it continued the inequity between groups, it was received with scant enthusiasm.

The campaign continued for a still more liberal law. This culminated in the introduction in the last Congress of the Neely bill (S. 457) which provided for optional retirement after 30 years' service, at 58, 60 and 64 years.

In a previous article, this writer discussed the failure of the Neely bill, but omitted some of the reasons which contributed to its failure. It failed because there is no justification for retiring employes as early as 58 years of age and 30 years of service. It failed because some of the organized employes would not concede that the Government should also have the right of optional retirement. It failed because the inequity as between the various age groups was perpetuated. It failed because it did not have wholehearted support of Administrative officials; and it finally developed that there was a division even among the organizations which originally sponsored the bill.

Among those we envy is Cabell Phillips, of the WPA press service and now the squire of Mohican Hills. Phillips, to escape the insufferable weather, has taken a large stone house overlooking the river and there, surrounded by lawns and woods, feels the cool breezes and enough pity, we think, for the other slaves who have to live in town . . . The American Federation of Government Employes holds a meeting at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the north Interior Auditorium; Col. Charles I. Stengle will speak . . . The sixth performance of the Union Playhouse, under auspices of Agriculture Branch of Local 2, N. F. F. E., will be held Tuesday evening, August 30, in the Agriculture Auditorium . . .

Navy May Ask 3,000 More Men For New Vessels

By the Associated Press.

Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, said yesterday the Navy might ask the next Congress to authorize a "modest increase of 2,000 to 3,000 men in its enlisted strength."

More men will be needed, he said, to man new vessels being constructed under the naval expansion program.

The Assistant Secretary discussed naval affairs with President Roosevelt yesterday. He said he told the Chief Executive the building program was progressing satisfactorily.

Work is going forward smoothly, he said, on two battleships now under construction. He said he hoped private yards would submit bids October 5 for two more battleships.

If the private yards do not offer satisfactory bids, Edison said, it would be necessary for the Navy to rearrange its construction plans and build the vessels in its own yards.

The GENTLER SEX

After the Ball.

"How'd you like the party last night?"

"I thought it was a lovely party. How did you?"

"I thought it was a grand party . . . say, did you happen to taste any of those little round sandwiches?"

"Yes, what on earth was in them?"

"I don't know, but they tasted awfully funny."

"That's just what I thought!"

"I suppose I oughtn't to say this, but . . . well, I didn't think any of the sandwiches were fit to eat."

"I didn't either. How'd you like the ice cream?"

"Oh . . . it was all right . . . I guess, only . . ."

"Only what?"

"Well, the plates she served it on . . ."

"That was just what I was thinking!"

"They looked to me as if they came from the 10-cent store."

"I bet they did."

"Another thing—well, I don't like to be critical or anything like that, but—well, didn't you think it was sort of funny serving brick ice cream?"

"Yes. It looked to me as if—well, I won't say it."

"Go ahead."

"Well, as if she thought she was feeding a lodge."

"But you know the thing I couldn't get over was the dish she passed the mints in."

"I was thinking about that, too, but I hated to say it."

"It looked as if it had been won at a bridge party."

"Well, of course I'm not saying these things to be mean, for aside from the refreshments it was really a very nice party."

"Yes, it really was—only there was just one thing——"

"What was that?"

"Well, I don't think she looked after her guests very well. I know a lot of people stood around in corners."

"I noticed that very thing. Look at me—the way I got stuck with old Col. Wagg——"

"Yes, and I couldn't get away from the awful Mrs. Flute——"

"Well, I feel terribly ashamed saying this—but, well th truth is I never was so bored in my life."

"That's just the way with me—only I hated to say it."

"The whole trouble is she's not the type that can make a party go."

"No, but if she'd just had decent refreshments——"

"Yes, and she invited such funny people——"

"Yes, and another thing—there's not a comfortable chair in the house——"

"Well, of course I really feel like a wretch mentioning those little things——"

"Well, it's the truth."

"Yes, and really aside from those things it was a very nice party."

"Y-, it really was."

Jacket Dresses Ideal For Coming Cool Days

Wide World Photo.

WHAT to wear during that difficult in-between season now approaching when it's not quite cold enough to don a heavy coat is always a problem. A costume such as the one shown above is the perfect solution of this dilemma. What is more, it exemplifies three of the newest fashion trends—the two-color ensemble, the squarish lines in jackets, and the high crowned hat. The dress, of spruce blue, lightweight woolen, may be worn later under a heavy coat. The short swagger coat is brown in a deep pile wool that looks something like fur. The hat and the trimming on the coat are spruce blue. This youthful looking costume would also do duty again in the coolish days of spring.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Who Is Newcomer to Washington and Who Has Never Had a Friend, Asks Help With Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been in Washington only two months and having read your column just about every day, I feel that you can help me. I come from a small town in the Middle West, and am now a Government clerk here. I left my home because I was very miserable. I had no job, no friends—in fact, nothing to keep me there. All my life I have been an extreme introvert. I suppose it will sound incredible when I tell you that I have never had a personal friend.

• • • •

My father is a farmer and he and my mother spend all of their time working and have no social life whatever. They reared me to live in the same way. I took a very impersonal attitude toward my parents and they, likewise, toward me. I have never felt that I could "talk" to my mother as some girls do. While going to high school, I studied very hard, came home, helped my mother, read, did my school assignments for the next day and went to bed. I have never gone to a dance or had a date. I would not know how to act. I have spent practically all of my life in this manner and I am now 20.

• • • •

I enjoy working here very much, but here is my problem—I cannot mix with people at all, I feel so self-conscious, have a terrible inferiority complex and do not take any interest in boys. Twice I have fallen in love with members of my own sex. I am so miserable when I am with people that I would rather suffer without them. I have always lived entirely alone. I do not think that I could live with anybody except my parents. I realize that I am very abnormal, but do you think I could ever get on the right track? I am exceptionally attractive. Sometimes I don't think I can live this way any longer, but what else can I do? Sincerely, MISS K.

Supplying the Deficit.

DEAR MISS K.: It is easy to understand that you would never have a "personal friend," when one considers the nature and circumstances of your rearing. It is also easy to understand your erstwhile aversion to men and your two "crushes" on members of your own sex. Social adequacy and normal emotional responsiveness are aspects of personality which are best developed in a child by parental precept, example and encouragement from the cradle upward. When both parents fail their child in this regard, a deplorable deficit in training and experience remains to be supplied in later life.

• • • •

However, this deficit can be—and in many instances has been—supplied by the individual himself, through his own intelligent and indefatigable efforts. I know it is the fashion of the hour (amongst those who make intellectual or, had we not better say, pseudo-intellectual pretensions) to sniff at the writings (both syndicated and book form) of Dale Carnegie. But anyone acquainted with the so-called seamier side of life, who knows of its heartbreaking denials and disappointments and frustrations and repressions, cannot but appreciate, applaud and be grateful for his innumerable thumb-nail biographies of persons whose mature lives bore fruit of happiness, success and renown, in spite of the fact that they had their roots in the soil of a background as barren as yours.

• • • •

Don't make the mistake of supposing your case is uniquely peculiar. Thousands upon thousands of men and women have arrived at the threshold of maturity with handicaps similar and equal to, or greater than yours. But I daresay that only a handful of that number have had the intelligence to recognize the nature of their handicap and the present limitation it imposes; very few could analyze their difficulty as intelligently and as dispassionately as you have done here. And it is the intelligent, ambitious, innately resourceful, indefatigable minority who embark upon a corrective program of re-education—and eventually achieve a social competence, a spiritual strength and integrity, a distinctiveness of personality and an emotional balance that seem, paradoxically, to have been actually enriched as a result of the earlier deprivation. It is the old law of compensation working in their behalf, I suppose. But it is a law whose workings must first be evoked by one's own efforts.

• • • •

There is a real advantage inherent in having to overcome such a handicap as yours. It is the necessity for having to develop what might be called a scientific understanding of human nature, of man's mind and psyche; an understanding that, once acquired, will give you a lasting advantage over those who take life as it comes, for what it seems to be. On achieving such understanding even partially, you can review your own miseries, mistakes and deprivations of the past with new insight and realize how absurdly and ridiculously unnecessary it is (or would be) to suppose your social and emotional life must be hopelessly blighted because of them. You will be able to contrast what was your unenlightened reaction to what might have been an enlightened and wholly different reaction. You will see how to turn the past to account in the future.

I recommend that you read Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's "How to Be Happy Though Human," and Floyd Dell's "Love in the Machine Age"—the first for an understanding of yourrself, specifically; and the second for an understanding of yourself as a human being against the backdrop of man's moral, emotional and social history. For spiritual uplift, read Basil King's, "The Conquest of Fear," and for your personality's sake, read Margery Wilson's "Your Personality and God."

• • • •

Incidentally, I know a man who, in the brief space of two years, made a complete come-back from the regions of despair and defeat to the upper air of personal happiness and professional honors, after having read, for the first time, at the age of 36, "The Conquest of Fear." He had tumbled from the heights to the depths some time before, losing position, personal fortune and his wife's companionship. At the time he read the book, he had been dependent and without source of income for over a year, and, to complicate matters, though reconciliation with his wife was out of the question, there were—or appeared to be—reasons why a divorce was impossible. Yet, within two years after reading the book, he had his freedom, was happily married again and was functioning in topmost executive capacity with a firm whose name is a household word. The miracle of his changed fortune he attributed, without reservation or qualification, to the change that had taken place in his own spirit while reading King's book. Serenity, courage and optimism supplanted and what had been anxiety fear and despair.

• • • •

Don't depend on reading and study alone to solve your problem, however. You must learn how to play. Your inability to play is the greatest barrier between yourself and your contemporaries—the reason why you feel so miserably self-conscious in their company. Read Dr. Henry C. Link's, "The Return to Religion," if you wish to know the scientific reasons why group play has such a beneficial effect on personality. The inordinately shy or self-conscious person forgets himself in meeting the purely physical and technical demands of the occasion. He finds himself laughing, exclaiming, spontaneously employing first-name terms, and generally acting like an average and normal human being, once the excitement of the game has claimed him.

• • • •

I would recommend for you—first, a good dancing class, where you will get practice with men partners (call me for references, if you know of none such); then, a course of swimming lessons (this exercise has a most exhilarating psychological effect), and some strenuous outdoor exercise (for you are decidedly young enough to "take it") such as tennis. Also, of course, bridge—and learn to play a first-class hand in all varieties. Top this off, as you can find the time and money, with instruction in riding, golf, and any other forms of social play that your inclinations and imagination suggest. You could easily afford to devote two years to such a self-improvement program without feeling a moment's distress if no close relationships with either sex developed during that time. Just remember that here you are, aged 20, and sent back to the primary grade, so to speak, to make up in two years' time what most persons have 15 years or so to dawdle over.

• • • •

If you wish a friendly adviser, of a father-confessor and philosopher-friend-and-guide sort, to sustain you through such a reconstruction period; if you feel that you may crack up unless you can discuss your problem in unreserved detail with someone, then I suggest you contact Dr. Elmer Klein, psychiatrist with the Washington Life Adjustment Center, at 1464 Columbia road, northwest; telephone, ADams. 1033. I feel that some of his advice, at least, would parallel that which is condensed, in popular form, in Dr. Wolfe's book ("How to Be Happy Though Human")—but I realize that in times of stress, no book can take the place of the directly friendly and human response. Wide Flared Skirts Featured in Paris

Paris (AP).—The day silhouette in winter collections shown here was on more liberal lines due to wider flared skirts and coats as well as bloused backs. Wider shoulders and fuller sleeves were seen. Skirts were short, the majority just covering the knee. Waist-lines were normal, and necklines were high except for a few square-necked dresses.

Lavish day trimmings included passementerie braids fringed with tassels. Elaborate pailette embroideries for day and evening were seen along with new Javanese-jeweled embroideries at necklines.

Thin Girl to Keep Looks Should Conserve Energy

Despite all the bustle connected with movie-making, Loretta Young maintains her loveliness through a common sense health program.

Plenty of Sleep Needed; Dies Should Be Simple and Include Cod Liver Oil and Milk; Serene Philosophy Helps.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE THIN girls could learn a lot from the movie stars who have trouble keeping their weights up . . . Oh, yes, there are a few! While it is a break to be ultraslim so that the figure photographs well, too little weight is not attractive and it is apt to mean too little energy.

In the movies it's work, work, work all the time and a star needs plenty of energy to stand up to her career, and so does any other working girl. Because so often the thin girl with a job thinks she hasn't the time for a build-up, I want to tell you about Loretta Young.

Miss Young is so lovely looking (and even lovelier offscreen!) that it never occurs to anyone she easily could be too thin. But Miss Young, who plays those frivolous roles to perfection, has worked out a common-sense health program that will surprise you. You will wonder how she finds the time for it and how she could be so thoroughgoing.

Gets 10 Hours of Sleep.

This star's working day begins at 6 o'clock in the morning, so when she is working in a picture she goes Now if you had to go to bed at that to bed every night at 8 o'clock. time, you would feel abused, but Miss Young knows that she must have ten hours' sleep when she is working under strain. Then, after the picture is finished, she turns into an outdoor girl. She does not stay in the sun too much, however, for she thinks that overtanning causes wrinkles.

Her diet measures are simply balanced menus, plus cod liver oil and milk—and that's a combination that will keep any girl's weight perfect.

Some of Miss Young's philosophy might help you, too. She believes very sincerely that if you work for a thing you can get it, but that "sometimes when you try for a thing and do not get it, what you do get is better." We could save ourselves a lot of worr. by adopting that philosophy!

She's Still "Going Up."

She is quite happy, she told me, that she is "getting along." She has arrived at the ripe ag of 26! In her opinion, it is the women with a few years to their credit who are fascinating.

Do you agree that the first ten years are the hardest?" I asked.

"Yes," she replied, "And after that they get harder. It's not the getting there. It's the staying there, and you can't stand still in this business. I certainly do not think that I am at the top, and I try to go up rather than down."

There's no denying that a star's career is exacting, and if Miss Young's program will keep her weight perfect, it will do the same for any thin girl. Try her plan of diet and exercise, seasoned with a nice philosophy to keep you from worrying. You owe it to your health and looks.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, August 15.

THE HISTORIC problem of screaming women has been brought before me with eloquent violence by Mary Thomson, of Buffalo, who vigorously deplores the instinct of our sex to solve all problems of fright, shock or anger by opening the mouth widely and letting off a shrill howl. Quite rightly, she points out that it makes no sense, that it renders us silly muffins and may even endanger life and safety by starting a gallop, not walk, to the nearest exit.

She further notes that while newspapers, magazines and spellbinders are constantly demanding that we cultivate poise, they seem to forget that the quality is chiefly useful in an emergency, when we just don't seem to have it. We think all we have to do to summon help, confound the traditional male enemy or relieve our tantrums is to shriek. Maybe so, but it is ridiculous and dangerous. When it comes to being panic-starters, I fear we stand and holler alone!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Far be it for me to bicker with a colleague. Live and let live, is the old Hughes motto, copped in toto from old vaudeville days. But my contemporary, Eleanor Roosevelt, began her daily piece, not long ago, "We are having beautiful weather. Yesterday it was warm and sunny, but there was enough breeze so that driving was pleasant." Well, it just happened that that was the eleventh day we Manhattan Island slaves were cursing and dripping through temperatures never below 80. The city touched misery's nadir. Sour-faced, nervous, beaten, we stumbled down life's dismal pathway. And we are "having beautiful weather." Well, my dear Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, you are a dirt-soil farmwoman, and I will make you a little David Harum swap. You just come here to Murray Hill, in the broken heart of heat-shattered Manhattan, and write your daily piece. I will gladly go up to Hyde Park, or to Patchogue, Long Island, where breezes blow across the porches where you do your literary stuff.

Careers in Night-Club Spotlight Still Draw Social Butterflies

Sally Clark, Latest to Seek Singing Fame, Plans to Continue Torch Trilling, After Marriage.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

With social register butterflies fluttering around the performer's spotlight in a number of city and resort night clubs, word comes from New York that booking agents are being showered with applications from debs, sub-debs and post-debs who crave torch-singing careers. Meanwhile, rumors going the rounds in Boston have it that Sally Clark, sister of President Roosevelt's newest daughter-in-law, has no intention of giving up her career after she marries George Xavier McLanahan, on January 6. She plans to shine in the night club spotlight just as long as contracts are forthcoming, according to latest reports from the Back Bay district, and has highest hopes for the success of her appearance in New York next month.

One of the latest recruits from society, Sally Clark, probably will follow the pattern of such stellar figues as Eve Symington and Sunny Forbes, who have negotiated marriage and a career and managed to make a success of both.

Sunny Forbes, 25-year-old cousin of the Roosevelts, and the mother of 3-year-old Baby Sandra, was one of the first to pave the way from the social register to the night-club stage. The daughter of Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, of Washington, and the late Mr. Robbins, who was United States Minister to Canada, she was one of the first top-flight social figures to win professional laurels and still retain her listing in the social register. From the first her career has progressed nicely. Asked why she decided to slant her talent toward night clubs, she replied, "Well, frankly, I did it for cash." She is the wife of socially prominent Alexander Cochran, of Boston.

Several Social Lights Mix Careers and Marriage

Eve Symington, wife of W. Stuart Symington 3d, and daughter of Representative James W. Wadsworth, is another registerite who has successfully synchronized marriage and a career. A granddaughter of the late John Hay, Secretary of State for Theodore Roosevelt, she has established herself as one of Gotham's most popular night-club singers and has still retained her place in the social register.

On the other hand, Marian Hughes Whitehead Pierce was dropped from the little black book when she started professional appearances in a New York club. Formerly the wife of Conkey Whitehead, well-known Atlanta sportsman, she later married the socially prominent Andrew G. Pierce 3d, of New Bedford, Mass.

Miriam Fairbank, widow of the wealthy Livingston Fairbank, is another member of top-drawer society who has made the grade as a night-club singer. She began her career before her husband's death and not long ago she signed a new long-term and highly lucrative contract. Apparently, her social registering still remains unchallenged.

Adelaide Moffett Still Winning Acclaim

Adelaide Moffett, who has been Saratoga Springs' chief trilling attraction this season has never had to bother about being dropped from the register, never having been in it. The daughter of the former Federal Housing authority, James Moffett, she has, however, made quite a name for herself since she deserted Park avenue for career climbing on Broadway. Prior to that she took a pre-medical course at the Russell Sage Foundation, in Troy, N. Y., and had a fling in radio. She is the widow of David Brooks and is still frequently referred to as Adelaide Moffett Brooks, although frequently she has voiced her desire to be known professionally by her maiden name.

SOCIETY - GO - ROUND: Augusto Rosso, Italian Ambassador to the Soviet Union, and Signora Rosso, who was formerly Mrs. Frances Wilkinson Bunker, of Washington, are spending some time at the HF Bar Ranch at Saddlestring, Wyo. They are accompanied by Signora Rosso's son, George Bunker, who will return to his studies at the Pomfret School, Connecticut, in the fall . . . Mrs. Randall H. Hagner, her daughter, Isabella, and her aunt, Miss Alice Clark, were others who recently registered at HF Bar Ranch . . . Still another visitor there in the past fortnight was Miss Marian Martin, of the Republican National Committee . . . Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg will return to Washington Friday from Rehoboth Beach, Del., where they have had a cottage for several weeks . . . Accompanied by their daughter, Eloise Richberg, they will sail August 24 on the Paris for Europe, where they will spend several weeks. Returning September 29 on the Manhattan, they will come to Washington October 1 . . . The Diplomatic Corps has a new "mytsery man." Shortly after Otakar Kabelac, retiring secretary of the Czechoslovak Legation, left, a new staff member replaced him. But you can't find out the new man's name. At least, I couldn't. "He doesn't want to be bothered with automobile salesmen and photographers," was the explanation yesterday from the legation.

Dr. and Mrs. Scandiffio Planning Visit to N. Y.

Dr. and Mrs. Mario Scandiffio will leave today for East Hampton, Long Island, where they will be the guest of Mrs. Scandiffio's sister, Mrs. James McGuire, jr., at her summer home.

They expect to return to Washington about the first of next month.

Hawkinses Back From Extensive Tour of Europe

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hawkins have finally returned to Washington from an extensive trip through Europe, and for the time being, are at the Wardman Park Hotel. Included in journey was a visit to the Dublin Horse Show in Ireland.

Mrs. Hawkins was before her marriage early in the summer Miss Christine Ekengren. She is a sister of Miss Elsie Ekengren, of Washington, who is now making a series of visits on Long Island.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins were glimpsed lunching at Pierre's restaurant. "Nobody's in town," theoretically, yet the dining room was thronged, among those present being Mrs. Louis Hardie and her daughter, Miss Betty Hardie, whom she is visiting. Also seen was Michal Budny, of the Polish Embassy, lunching with Mrs. Evatt Barnum, who will leave on Friday for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Evatt, of Boston, at their summer home at Bald Peak, N. H. She will return after Labor Day.

Mrs. Hines, Jr. Widely Feted

Was Guest of Honor at Luncheon Given on Sunday.

Mrs. John L. Hines, jr., of Fort Myer, Va., who is the guest of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John L. Hines at their summer place near White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., is being widely entertained. On Sunday she was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. William B. Hines at the Greenbrier Golf and Tennis Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Grant, of 1650 Harvard street, who have been occupying a cottage on Baltimore row at the Greenbrier for the past few days, departed Sunday by motor for a continued wedding trip through West Virginia and Virginia. Before her marriage, Mrs. Grant was Miss Elizabeth Brubaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Brubaker, of Washington.

Virginia Hayes Becomes Bride

Wed to Frank Fiormanti in Church Ceremony Last Evening.

At a simple ceremony in the Church of St. Stephen and The Incarnation, Miss Virginia Grace Hayes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Hayes, became the bride last evening at 7 o'clock of Frank Joseph Fioramonti. The Rev. Raymond L. Wolven of the National Cathedral officiated at their marriage, which was followed by a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Risdon, of Chevy Chase, Md., brother-in-law and sister of the bride.

The latter, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chiffon and satin made with a full skirt and satin bolero. Her shoulder-length veil was held in place by a spray of white satin roses, and lace mittens completed her costume. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Norman F. Sparks, her sister, served as the bride's only attendant, wearing a blue frock made like hers. She carried pink roses and a spray of blue satin roses was pinned in her hair.

Frank W. Glenn was best man, and the ushers included Dr. A. E. Briguglio, Norman F. Sparks, R. Lee Risdon and F. Alton Loftus.

Immediately after the reception the couple left for a wedding trip through the New England States, the bride wearing a black sheer frock trimmed in white.

Mr. Fioramonti attended George Washington University and the Columbus University Law School. His wife is a member of Beta Chi National Sorority.

Takoma Park Girl Marries Arkansas Man August 27

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew M. Bunten, of Takoma Park, have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Helen Stewart Bunten, and William Henry Dvorachek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Edmond Dvorachek, of Fayetteville, Ark.

The ceremony will take place on Saturday, August 27, at the Washington Cathedral at 4:30 o'clock. Miss Elizabeth Bunten will be maid of honor for her sister, and Mrs. Raymond Robinson, of Washington, and Miss Mae Ellen Dvorachek, of Fayetteville, Ark., sisters of the prospective bridegroom, will be bridesmaids.

Harold E. Dvorachek will be best man for his brother and ushers will be Scott E. Duskin and Raymond B. Robinson, both of Washington.

The bride-elect attended George Washington University and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. She is chairman of the junior group of the Martha Washington Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mr. Dvorachek attended the University of Arkansas and is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. After their wedding, Mr. Dvorachek and his bride will make their home in Washington.

Miss Twigg Wed To Clarendon Man

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Haldon Twigg announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Estalee Twigg and George Patterson Taylor, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Patterson Taylor, of Clarendon, Va.

The ceremony took place yesterday morning at 8:30 o'clock at the Clarendon, Methodist Episcopal Church. The Rev. H. T. Hildebrand officiated. The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her father.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple departed for a two-week motor trip through the South. On their return they will live in Arlington County.

John H. Howard Weds Miss Stark In Boston Church

Harris & Swing
MRS. JOHN HAYES HOWARD.

Christ Church in Cambridge, Mass., which was built in 1759 and is the oldest in the city, was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock of Miss Nancy Stark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolcott Stark, of 1961 Biltmore street, to John Hayes Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Hayes Howard, of Towanda, Pa. The Rev. Gray Blandy officiated.

After September 10, when they return from a motor trip through Maine and the Gaspe Peninsula, the couple will reside at 65 Dana street, Cambridge.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin made with short puffed sleeves and a brief train. Her finger tip length veil fell from a tulle halo trimmed with orange blossoms, and she carried white roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Mildred Overton, of Portsmouth, Va., was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Sari de Goencz, of North Adams, Mass., and Ruth Rawlings, of Washington. Miss Shirley Powell, cousin of the bride, and Howard Nonken, the bridegroom's nephew, served as flower girl and ring bearer. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore frocks of white net over taffeta, of the same pattern as the bride's gown, and carried summer flowers in pastel shades. Their small halo hats were trimmed with veils. The flower girl wore a Kate Greenaway dress of white and carried a basket of pink rosebuds.

Martin Charles Stark served as his brother's best man, and the ushers were Richard Taylor, Arthur Eugene Fitzgerald, Walter T. White and Henry Backenstoss. A reception at the Hotel Continental in Cambridge followed the ceremony.

The bride attended the Madeira School in nearby Virginia and was graduated from Wellesley College in 1937. Mr. Stark was graduated from the Kansas State College of Agriculture and Applied Science and is now a member of the electrical engineering staff of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he is completing work for a master's degree.

Mrs. G. Mason Flies to Havana To Close Home

Will Rejoin Husband Here, Then Visit Two Sons in New York.

Mrs. George Grant Mason arrived in Havana yesterday by plane to close the home which she and her husband have maintained there until he was appointed a member of the newly created Civil Aeronautics Authority. After she returns to Washington in several days, Mrs. Mason will go to Tuxedo Park, N. Y., to join her two young adopted sons, Tony and Philip, who are visiting Mr. Mason's father.

On their return late in September, the family will occupy the home which the Masons have leased from Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms. This residence, at 1224 Thirteenth street in Georgetown, was occupied last season by Mrs. Harold Walker and the late Mr. Walker.

Edward J. Noble, recently named chairman of the Aeronautics Authority, will be joined here in September by Mrs. Noble and their two subdebutantes, June and Sally. At present they are dividing their time between the Thousand Island Club, of which Mr. Noble is president, and their residence at Greenwich, Conn. Mr. Noble joins them for week-ends.

Hudgins Return Home Tonight

Couple, Back From Wedding Trip, to Reside in McLean, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. John Melton Hudgins, whose marriage took place Friday at noon in the Methodist Episcopal Church in McLean, Va., will return from their wedding trip this evening to make their home in McLean.

The bride, who was formerly Mrs. Edith Marland Faustman, is a sister of Dr. Albert Marland, of Washington. Mr. Hudgins is the son of the late Lieut. John Melton Hudgins, U. S. N., and Mrs. Horace Greeley Macfarland, of Washington. The Rev. Raymond Maxwell officiated at the wedding ceremony, which was witnessed by the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Macfarland, and Mr. and Mrs. John Rawls, of Chevy Chase.

After the wedding the newly wedded couple and Mr. and Mrs. Rawls were luncheon guests of Mrs. Macfarland at the Army-Navy Club here. The bridegroom, who is widely known in Washington, is with the Federal Housing Administration.

New Mexico Girl Is Guest Here of Former Teacher

A New Mexico reunion is being held here in Washington, with Mrs. William B. Covert and Miss Bertha Dunkle as the principals. Miss Dunkle, whose home is in Gallup, is visiting Mrs. Covert at her residence, 1502 Meridian place. A senior at the University of New Mexico, where she is president of Xi Chapter and Phi Mu sorority, Miss Dunkle was once a pupil of Mrs. Covert.

The latter, the former Dorothy Ladd, is the foster daughter of Berton I. Staples, of Coolidge, N. Mex., whose museum of arts and crafts at Casas del Navaje is one of the show places of the Southwest and a famous rendezvous for men and women of science and letters. It was in an adobe house on the Staples estate that the late Mrs. Harold Ickes, first wife of the Secretary to the Interior, wrote her book "Mesa Land."

Entertaining Miss Dunkle during her stay here are Miss Kiku Hirawaka and Miss Inez Bushner, who at one time resided in Gallup. Miss Dunkle will be joined shortly by her fiance, Donald J. Dousman, jr., of Baldwin, Long Island, a classmate at the University of New Mexico, and his mother and sister, Mrs. D. J. Dousman and Miss Beverly Dousman. After a tour of the Skyline Drive, Miss Dunkle will return with them for a visit at their home. She will resume her studies at the university in September.

Mrs. S. A. Swiggett Talks For Takoma Park Club

By Bessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Samuel A. Swiggett, former chairman of art for the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday talked on flower arrangements at the August meeting of the garden department of the Takoma Park Club. Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt was hostess to the members and guests at her home, 120 Chestnut street, with its garden through which runs a spring-fed brook.

The department meeting was held indoors and was followed by a luncheon under the trees.

Mrs. Swiggett discussed simple arrangements following the Japanese design. She used to illustrate her talk red roses in a green bowl, red and orange zinnias in a flaring vase of peasant pottery, and golden rod and yellow daisies in a blue and white pot.

Not only were the women interested in her flower arrangements and the rules she gave for them, but also in the display of pottery vases which she had made. She favors pottery in darker tones as a background for most flowers.

To Give Library Flower Encyclopedia

Mrs. E. E. Boyner, chairman of the garden group, presided. It was voted at the business session to present to the Takoma Park, (Md.) Library an encyclopedia of American flowers. This action was particularly gratifying to the hostess, as she is president of the Takoma Park Library Association, as well as an active member of the Woman's Club.

The al fresco luncheon, which is a feature of each meeting of the department in the summer, was in charge yesterday of Mrs. H. E. Ewing, chairman, Mrs. Clarence Ross, Mrs. G. H. White, Mrs. A. S. Pratt, Mrs. N. O. Jones and Mrs. J. A. Kurz.

Mrs. Pratt and three of her neighbors, Mrs. Frederick Buehring, Mrs. H. E. Allanson and Mrs. Peter Remsen, all members of the Takoma Park Woman's Club, observe an "at home" day ever spring when their gardens are open to the public. This year nearly 500 persons visited Mrs. Pratt's in one day to see azaleas which were then in bloom.

Brook a Feature Of All Four Places

The little brook runs through all of the gardens and natural planting has been followed in them all, making them uniform in character although each expresses the individuality of its owner.

The shade of the trees and the coolness of the clear water were an ideal setting for the luncheon in the heat of the day. Chairs were arranged in shady places and the luncheon was served on trays.

Large bushes of paniculata hydrangeas are now a feature of the garden. There are also a few Henrii and specoisum lilies, both the album and rubrum varieties which last week were in their prime. Near the brook are also the hardy begonia and cardinal flowers.

Among the guests who attended the meeting and luncheon were Mrs. Howard Alexander, Mrs. Frederick Lewton, of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association, Mrs. E. Francis McDevitt, and Miss Reba Shumaker, who is here from Tyler, Tex., visiting her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Shumaker.

Members present included Mrs. John Quinn, Mrs. George E. Davis, Mrs. Thomas Marshall, Mrs. Guy Goodman, Mrs. Walter P. Harman, Mrs. Arthur P. Harrison, Mrs. Charles L. Greenfield, Mrs. William H. Burke, Mrs. G. Franklin Wisner, Mrs. C. C. Waters, Mrs. Ruth Codier, Mrs. M. C. Himmelwright, Mrs. Albert Lingle and Mrs. Theron C. Brooks.

Clubs to Honor Margaret Brent

The memory of Margaret Brent, a feminist in Maryland before such a classification was ever thought of for women leaders—will be honored by the dedication of a bronze tablet Thursday at St. Marys City. The ceremony is being sponsored by the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs at the restored State house there in commemoration of the tercentenary of her arrival in Maryland.

The board of directors of the federation last February authorized the president of the fourth district, Mrs. James Alexander Robertson, of Annapolis, to make arrangements for the event.

Harry L. Harcum, of Salisbury, new State president, will make the dedicatory address, and Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, of College Park, a former president of the Maryland federation, will talk on "Citizenship Links Forged by Margaret Brent."

The committee includes Mrs. Robert Moss, of Annapolis, chairman; Mrs. Robertson and Miss Marie M. Mount, of College Park.

Other memorials have been established to the early feminist and it is for her Margaret Brent Hall, women's dormitory at the University of Maryland, is named.

A feature story was devoted to her in the June Maryland State Federation Magazine the final issue under the administration of Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, of Chevy Chase, as State president, and magazine editor.

University Women Are Entertained by Mary Vaccaro

Miss Mary Vaccaro last night was hostess to members of the players' group of the American Association of University Women, entertaining them in the sunken garden of her home in Chevy Chase.

A reading of "The Women" by Clara Boothe was the program for the evening, under the direction of Miss Jacquelyn Pringle. Parts were read by Miss Marta Brokaw, as Mary Haines; Miss Floreine Hurley as Sylvia Fowler; Miss Lola Long, Miss Manice Knight and Miss Frieda Junck.

Among others who attended were: Dr. Anna Ketcham, Miss Dorothy Moran, Mrs. Frances Colbert, Miss Winifred DeVoe, Miss Virginia Kinnard, Mrs. J. D. Durand, Miss Margaret Graham, Miss Ruby Streeter, Miss Grace Sargent and Miss Margaret Wentworth, of New York.

Yesterday afternoon the regular Monday tea was held at the clubhouse with Mrs. Ira Price Denning as hostess and Miss Eleanor Berge, as guest artist, presenting a vocal program. Assisting hostesses were Miss Mercedes Berry and Miss Martha Schmidt.

"THE WOMEN," by Clare Boothe, was read last night as the program for a garden party at which Miss Mary Vaccaro, of Chevy Chase, entertained the players' group of the American Association of University Women. Among those who read the play were (left to right) Miss Floreine Hurley, in the character of Sylvia Fowler, and Miss Marta Brokaw, as Mary Haines. Miss Jacquelyn Pringle was the director.

Eight and Forty To Hold Marche

The thirteenth annual marche of Salon 14 Departmental of the 8 et 40 will be held today and tomorrow at the Hotel Washington, presided over by Chapeau Departmental Helen M. McCabe.

The first night will be devoted to the regular business of the marche, closing with election of departemental officers, delegates and alternates to the national marche in Los Angeles in September.

The chairman of the session is Miss Mabel F. Straub with Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, Mrs. Edith Quinn, Mrs. Edith Landvoigt and Mrs. Helen Ware serving as her committee. Committee chairmen are: Permanent organization, Mrs. Landvoigt; credentials, Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren; registration, Mrs. Virginia McCarthy; rules, Emily J. Carey; constitution and by-laws, Mrs. Mary B. Corwin; resolutions, Mrs. Quinn.

The annual "wreck of initiates" will be held tomorrow at 6:30 with Catherine Crompton in charge. There will be installation of officers with Past Nationale Chapeau Dorothy B. Harper as the installing officer.

As the finale of the marche there will be a buffet supper with all members of the legion and auxiliary invited.

An award for bringing in the greatest number of members to the American Legion, the American Legion Auxiliary and the junior auxiliary will be presented to Mrs. Quinn, unopposed candidate to succeed Mrs. McCabe, who offered the award, as head of the District organization.

The Antlers.

When Nature seeks to gain an end
The marvelous will oft attend.
—The Old Naturalist.

Lightfoot the Deer and the Old Naturalist have long been friends. They understand each other. It is the same way with Lightfoot and Farmer Brown's Boy. So to the latter and to the Old Naturalist there was nothing surprsing in having Lightfoot step out into the clearing in front of the sugar house in which the Old Naturalist was spending the summer. But to Sue and Sammy, to whom this was a new experience, it was sort of breath-taking. Anyway, they held their breath as long as they could, so fearful were they of frightening Lightfoot away.

For perhaps a full minute Lightfoot stood with head held high, staring at the little group watching him. Then he lowered it and began to browse, moving along slowly, snatching a mouthful here and a mouthful there, flicking his tail from side to side, and now and then stopping to look curiously at the four motionless figures over by the sugar house. So gradually he worked around the clearing. Suddenly he threw up his head as if startled. For a second or two he stood motionless, his slender nose held high. Then, as if he had springs in his feet, he bounded away, head up and tail standing stiffly erect, showing the under side, so that it seemed to be all white.

"What frightened him?" Sammy asked.

The Old Naturalist chuckled. "You or Sue, or both of you, did," said he.

"I didn't so much as wiggle a finger!" retored Sammy indignantly, and Sue was equally insistent that she hadn't moved.

The Old Naturalist wet a finger and held it up. "I thought so," said he. "There is just a faint breeze blowing from us to where he was, and that marvelous nose of his told him that there were strangers here, and strangers are never to be trusted. Anyway, that is the way Lightfoot and a lot of other people in the Green Forest feel about the matter. He knows me, and he knows Tommy here, but he doesn't know you. Perhaps he will before you go back to the city. Just now he is nervous and easily frightened."

"Why now any more than any other time?" asked Sue.

"Because he doesn't feel too good, and he won't until those antlers of his are fully grown."

"Do you mean his horns?" Sammy wanted to know.

The Old Naturalist smiled. "I mean his antlers," said he. "It always seems to me a bit queer how people persist in using the wrong name for things, when it is just as easy to call them by their right names. Cows have horns. So do rams and goats. All male members of the Deer family have antlers. Perhaps you noticed that Lightfoot's had no sharp points, such as they will have in the fall."

"I did," replied Sue. "I wouldn't call them exactly fuzzy looking," said he, "but I know what you mean. They are covered with a sort of skin that looks something like velvet. In that state they are said to be in the velvet."

"Come in the house," said the Old Naturalist, and led the way. From a corner he picked up a single antler having five tines or points. "Lightfoot wore that last fall," said he. "I found it the other day where he dropped it last winter. It is half of his last year's crown or set of weapons, whichever you please. The other half is out there in the woods somewhere. Feel how hard this is, and look at the size of it. Then remember that it started as just a little knob on Lightfoot's head, and in just a few short months grew to be what you see there. It grew just as a plant grows. When I think of this I have a little feeling of awe, as if I were looking at something produced by true magic. Certainly it is as wonderful, a thing that is truly marvelous. Yet I've met people who see nothing wonderful in nature."

N.C. Democratic Club Plans Moonlight Cruise

Several prominent officials have been invited to attend the moonlight cruise of the North Carolina Democratic Club aboard the City of Washington Thursday night.

Among them are: The Assistant Secretary of Treasury and Mrs. John W. Hanes, Chairman of Federal Communication Commission and Mrs. Frank R. McNinch, Chairman of Federal Trade Commission and Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Dr. R. D. W. Connor, National Archivist, and Mrs. Connor; Justice Miller, United States Court of Appeals, and Mrs. Miller, and Assistant to Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Turner Battle.

All North Carolinians residing in and around the District have been invited to make the cruise. The club's headquarters are in the Raleigh Hotel.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

SUPREME OFFICERS of the Order of Job's Daughters are already arriving in Washington, in preparation for the session of the Supreme Guardian Council which will convene here next Tuesday at the Wardman Park.

Mrs. Elizabeth L. Warden, of Owosso, Mich., supreme guardian, came to Washington last week-end, and Miss Harriet McArthur, of St. Louis, junior past supreme guardian, arrived last night. Both will go today to Neeld Estate, Md., to remain until Thursday as guests of Mrs. Clarence Linz, of Bethel 1. Mrs. Nan Martin, supreme secretary, will arrive Tuesday from Omaha, Nebr.

• • • •

Sunday's trip to Elizabethtown, Pa., was arranged by a group of Eastern Star and Job's Daughters members in Mrs. Warden's honor. After a tour of the institution and a picnic luncheon on the grounds, the party visited Gettysburg.

Among the 25 who made the trip were Mrs. Helen D. Robbins, grand matron, and Harry J. Schmidt, grand patron of the Order of the Eastern Star in the District of Columbia; Mrs. Schmidt, who is secretary of the grand guardian council of Job's Daughters for the District; Mrs. Robbins' daughter, Rosa Robbins, marshal of Bethel 1; Mrs. Mary Teachum, grand guardian of the District, affectionately known to the girls as "Mother Teachum"; Marjorie Stein, queen of Bethel 1; John McConnell, drill master, who is preparing the local teams for the exhibition drill planned as part of the convention program; Henry Yeager, associate guardian of Bethel 1; his daughter, Margaret, guide of the Bethel, and Dorothy Jackson, junior princess of the same Bethel.

"DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY" is a wasted slogan so far as the D. C. Chapter of the American Red Cross is concerned. By the time Santa Claus gets out his signs and shakes off last year's tinsel, the chapter has hundreds of its packages wrapped, tied and practically delivered.

Through all the heat of summer, three busy volunteer workers have been filling Christmas bags to be sent to service men in hospitals in the Philippines. Miss Della Dennison, who is second vice chairman of the canteen corps, has been in charge, assisted by Miss Grace Lee and Miss Jessie Denniston (Miss Dennison and Miss Denniston are not related to each other and neither are their names, in case you wonder at the similarity in them.)

But, to get back to Christmas—the bags were made by the garment production department of the chapter under the chairmanship of Mrs. P. J. Altizer and more than 150 of them were filled. They are already on their way to the islands, aboard an Army transport.

In all of them are combs, pencils, writing paper, soap, playing cards, wash cloths, key cases and leather memo pads.

Such bags have been sent to men in foreign service by the Red Cross ever since 1916, when Gen. Pershing requested them for troops on the Mexican border.

Mrs. P. C. Ellett, one of the vice presidents of the D. C. P.-T. A., with her husband and their sons, Billy and Bobby, have gone to Lynn Haven Bay for a week and from there will go to Norfolk to spend a second week visiting relatives.

Six Are Chosen To Try Hines In Racket Case

Hines

isfactory jury," he said. "They seem to be very intelligent."

Fifty-five to Testify.

He professed some hope that the trial might not last more than three weeks, though counsel who have been familiar with the recent racket trials and with the preparations for this one, the most spectacular trial of a political figure in Manhattan since the days of "Boss" Tweed, were counting on a six weeks' minimum. Dewey announced today in court that he would place 55 witnesses on the stand, of whom, he said, about 50 would only take 15 minutes or so apiece.

Political implications of the trial came sharply into the foreground when Dewey informed prospective jurors that he would expect them to answer if they knew John Kelley, United States Marshal, Tammany leader of the Twenty-second Assembly District; William F. Kenneally, chairman of the executive committee of Tammany Hall, and its leader for the southern third of the Twelfth Assembly District; William Solomon, Tammany leader of the northern section of the Seventeenth Assembly District; as well as William C. Dodge, former district attorney; Magistrate Hulon Capshaw and the late Magistrate Francis J. Erwin.

He asked also if talesmen were acquainted with Matthew Kenny, Isaac N. Jacobson, an attorney; Michael J. Merkin, who is in the paint business; Harry Fishback, an electrical contractor, or Philip W. Hines, brother of the defendant.

"Is anyone acquainted with Max D. Steuer, James D. C. Murray, or John F. Curry," he asked.

Quizzed on Business Deals.

The talesmen were also asked if they ever had any business dealings with Emerson & Hines, electrical contractors, or with Thomas Emerson or James J. Hines, jr., member of the firm.

The Tammany leader entered the courtroom at 9:46 a. m. Dewey was late. Before the trial opened his aids were gathered at their places inside the rail, with a large cardboard box of records between them. Around this table were Assistant District Attorneys Sol Gelb, Herman J. McCarthy, Stanley Fuld, Charles P. Grimes and Livingston Goddard.

Dewey and Stryker shook hands and exchanged pleasantries. Hines stared at Dewey gravely, but there was no sign of recognition exchanged between them.

Many Have Excuses.

When the clerk called for those talesmen who wished to be excused to come forward, it seemed that more than half of the 300 who had taken all the benches in the courtroom moved forward together, and there was laughter. Justice Pecora warned the talesmen that none but "legal excuses" would be considered, and that any excuse predicated upon illness would have to be supported by the affidavit of a physician.

Hines indicated that he had no intention of dropping his political leadership in the Eleventh Assembly District or withdrawing his candidacy for re-election as a member of the Democratic State Committee and delegate to the party's State convention. His petitions for the offices are in circulation, although it is possible that his trial may still be in progress on primary day, September 20.

"I would withdraw the petitions if I thought they would be embarrass the party or my friends," he said. "But up in my district, you know, they still think pretty highly of me."

"I am 61 years old now," he said. "In 1903, I was married. My wife was then 17, and she was the prettiest girl in the District. She wanted to be with me here today, but I persuaded her it wouldn't be necessary until after the jury is selected. Then she'll be at my side. My three boys will be here today, though."

His sons, James, jr., Eugene and Philip, were in the building, but waited in a nearby corridor until the court had recessed for the day.

Hines said he felt no animosity towards Dewey.

"He's a nice young fellow, trying to do his job," the Tammany chieftain said. That phrase reminded him of an occasion years ago when his son, Philip, was taken to meet the late John J. McGraw, and bluntly informed the manager that his Giants had been "lousy" that day.

"Young people can be cruel that way," Hines mused, but he hastened to add that he did not want to give the impression that he felt persecuted. He said he considered the trial "a political battle" and expressed confidence that he would win it as he had won scores of political fights in the past.

2d Youth Congress Gets U. S. Welcome, PoughkeepsieSnub

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—A greeting on behalf of the Government of the United States, and a snub from the City of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., were given to delegates to the second World Youth Congress who assembled for their preliminary rally tonight.

"I am sure that I speak for my Government in saying that we look forward to the results of your deliberations with the highest hope," Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., said in an address for 500 delegates from 47 countries.

Also on the eve of opening the congress at Vassar College in Poughkeepsie to discuss means of attaining lasting peace and good will among nations, delegates were informed there would be no official greeting from the City of Poughkeepsie.

Acting Mayor William B. Duggan said he had given no orders for a reception because of what he termed the group's "internationalism."

Convicts Sought in Kidnaping Of Society Couple in St. Louis

Peggy Gross, 23, socially prominent St. Louis woman, shown here, and Daniel C. Fahey, jr., a Washingtonian employed in St. Louis, were kidnaped near St. Louis by two men who left the couple bound and gagged in woods near Minneapolis after driving them there in Fahey's car.

Pair Forced Former Capital Man and Girl Friend to Drive Them 800 Miles to St. Paul; G-Men Take Over Case.

G-Men yesterday combed the Middle West for traces of two gunmen who kidnaped a former Washington man and a St. Louis society girl, carrying them 800 miles across two State lines, before setting them free, uninjured, near St. Paul, Minn.

Daniel Cox Fahey, jr., 31, a landscape architect with the National Parks Service who worked in Washington until 1936, and Miss Peoby Gross, 23, of St. Louis, were held up by the men last Friday night as they sat in Fahey's car near St. Louis, they told investigators.

The couple left St. Paul late yesterday, their interrogation by Federal agents apparently ended. After three and a half hours in examination of FBI "rouge's gallery" they were unable to identify any known criminals' photographs as those of their abductors.

Others See Car.

Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Valley, of Osseo, Minn., told of seeing a car with four persons in it a short time before the couple was found, parked less than 100 feet from where the pair was discovered.

Hennepen County (Minneapolis) police have broadcast a lookout for James Meredieth and John Couch, Missouri former convicts, linked with the case when Miss Gross said one of her abductors had showed her a newspaper clipping about James Clyde Reed, now held on assault and robbery charges in Kennet, Mo. Reed had told Kennett officers he had been with Couch and Meredieth, leaving them shortly before his arrest in Arkansas.

Sedan Not Found.

The small, tan sedan in which the couple was abducted was still unreported last night. Fahey and Miss Gross were dumped from the car into a field a few miles north of St. Paul. Bound with wire and gagged, Fahey struggled to the highway and stopped a motorist.

FBI officials in Washington last night said they were satisfied the case involved kidnaping. Fahey said, "The only motive for the kidnaping seems to be that the men wanted transportation to Minnesota."

Typhoid Closes Children's Camps

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 15.—Typhoid fever today caused the closing of the two summer camps of the Heckscher Foundation for Children at Putnam Valley, N. Y. Nearly 200 children were taken home. The rest of the 450 children, between 5 and 15 years of age, who have been at the camps since July 1, will be taken to their homes in and around New York tomorrow and Wednesday.

Three cases of typhoid developed at the camp two weeks ago and since then three more children have come down with an illness suspected to be typhoid.

Traffic

The District of Columbia Medical Association announced plans to dramatize the city's daily accident record with a radio broadcast over station WMAL at 10:45 a. m. tomorrow.

The Junior Board of Commerce, through Walter Miller, chairman of its national traffic safety committee, will meet Thursday to formulate plans to continue The Washington Post-Junior Board program of organizing the independent trucking industry for safety.

Again blaming child fatalities directly on negligence of parents, the advisory committee agreed that adult education should be the first step undertaken.

Milk Plus Messages.

George Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, proposed to reach parents and motorists through distribution of safety messages with milk deliveries. His suggestion was amended to include bread deliveries.

Under this plan—assigned for study to a subcommittee—city dairies and bakeries would be asked to help by attaching appeals for co-operation to milk bottles and beneath the wrappers on loaves of bread.

Gen. Cox named two other subcommittees as follows:

Playgrounds: Keneipp, Lewis R. Barrett, District co-ordinator of recreation, and Mrs. Walter Fry, president of the Parent-Teachers' associations.

Enforcement and observance of regulations: Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the local A. A. A.; Police Inspector L. I. H. Edwards and M. O. Eldridge, assistant director of traffic.

A heated discussion of the playground problem was prompted by demands from Keneipp that 86 school grounds now closed be opened immediately for use of children.

His plea was opposed by Barrett, who contended that opening additional play spots was unnecessary. Adequate supervision of the grounds is impossible, Barrett said, and it is not practical to permit youngsters to supervise themselves.

He described hazards of unattended children using playground equipment as "almost as great as playing in traffic."

He was joined by Dr. Gosling, who said unsupervised play would increase "moral and physical hazards among the children."

Cleveland, of the AAA, urged rigid enforcement of existing regulations rather than adding new ones.

In response to a question by Gen. Cox, Inspector Edwards said present regulations could not be adequately enforced until the police department is allotted more men.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, who returned from a vacation to attend the meeting, urged adoption of a pedestrian control system. To this, Mrs. Fry, PTA president, replied:

Pedestrians 79 Per Cent of Dead.

"If we could discover a method of requiring parents and all adults to obey the law, then it wouldn't be so hard to teach the children. It is from us that the children learn—and it is up to us to face our responsibility."

Eldridge cited figures showing that last year 79 per cent of all traffic fatalities were pedestrians, and joined Van Duzer in urging a program of pedestrian control.

Meanwhile seven persons — five of them children — were injured in traffic mishaps yesterday. None was seriously hurt.

Marie Titlett, 6, 494 Maryland avenue northeast, suffered bruises and lacerations when struck near Tenth and C streets southwest and was treated at Providence Hospital.

When Wridis Smith, 3, colored, ran into the street near his home at 86 N street southeast, he received lacerations on his head and bruises.

Jane Turner, 14, of 1733 North Capitol street, and Jck Diamond, 9, of 50 Franklin street northeast, suffered minor injuries in separate accidents. They were hit by autos. Martha Lloyd, 18, of 2200 Nineteenth street northwest, escaped with a cut eye when hit by a Capital Transit Co. bus at Eighteenth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Policeman Roger Randall, of the First Precinct, injured his right arm and shoulder when struck by a street car while directing traffic at Fourteenth and E streets northwest.

Lena Rudden, 55, 1301 Saratoga avenue southeast, was injured in the day's "freak" accident. She was walking on the sidewalk in the 600 block of Seventh street northwest, when a mail truck knocked a large no-parking sign against her. She was taken to Emergency Hospital with cuts and bruises.

U. S. Refuses to Parole 'Baby Fraud' Defendant

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Parole Board refused yesterday to parole Helen Berroyer, convicted in the St. Louis "baby fraud" case of 1936.

Mrs. Berroyer was one of four convicted of using the mails to defraud Dr. Marsh Pitzman, St. Louis physician, obtaining money from him on the pretense a child had been born to Nellie T. Muench. The child was disclosed to have been adopted.

Safety Appeals to Accompany Milk and Bread

to recover.

Mrs. Bryant was not injured. Frank Valiquette was burned. They also were employes at the camp.

Mrs. Bryant and Valiquette related that as the motorboat in which Dodge was being conveyed to Little Current neared the shore, Dodge suddenly arose from the bottom of the boat and jumped into the bay. He evidently was suffering intense pain.

The body sank immediately, and the rest of the party, dazed and injured, made only a brief search before proceeding here.

The explosion occurred about 4 p. m. Mrs. Bryant and Valiquette said Dodge picked up a stick of dynamite which apparently had lain in the sand for years. As he turned it about in his fingers and broke it open it exploded.

The rest of the party got Dodge and the other two injured persons aboard the motorboat and started a desperate attempt to reach medical help 20 miles away.

Here the injured were taken by automobile to the Red Cross Hospital at Mindemoya, where it was said Mrs. Dodge had suffered injuries on the legs and body. Bryant's injuries were on the legs and arms and internal.

It was expected Mrs. Alfred G. Wilson, mother of Dodge and widow of John F. Dodge, who was one of the founders of the Dodge Motor Co., would arrive at this island tonight, flying from Michigan.

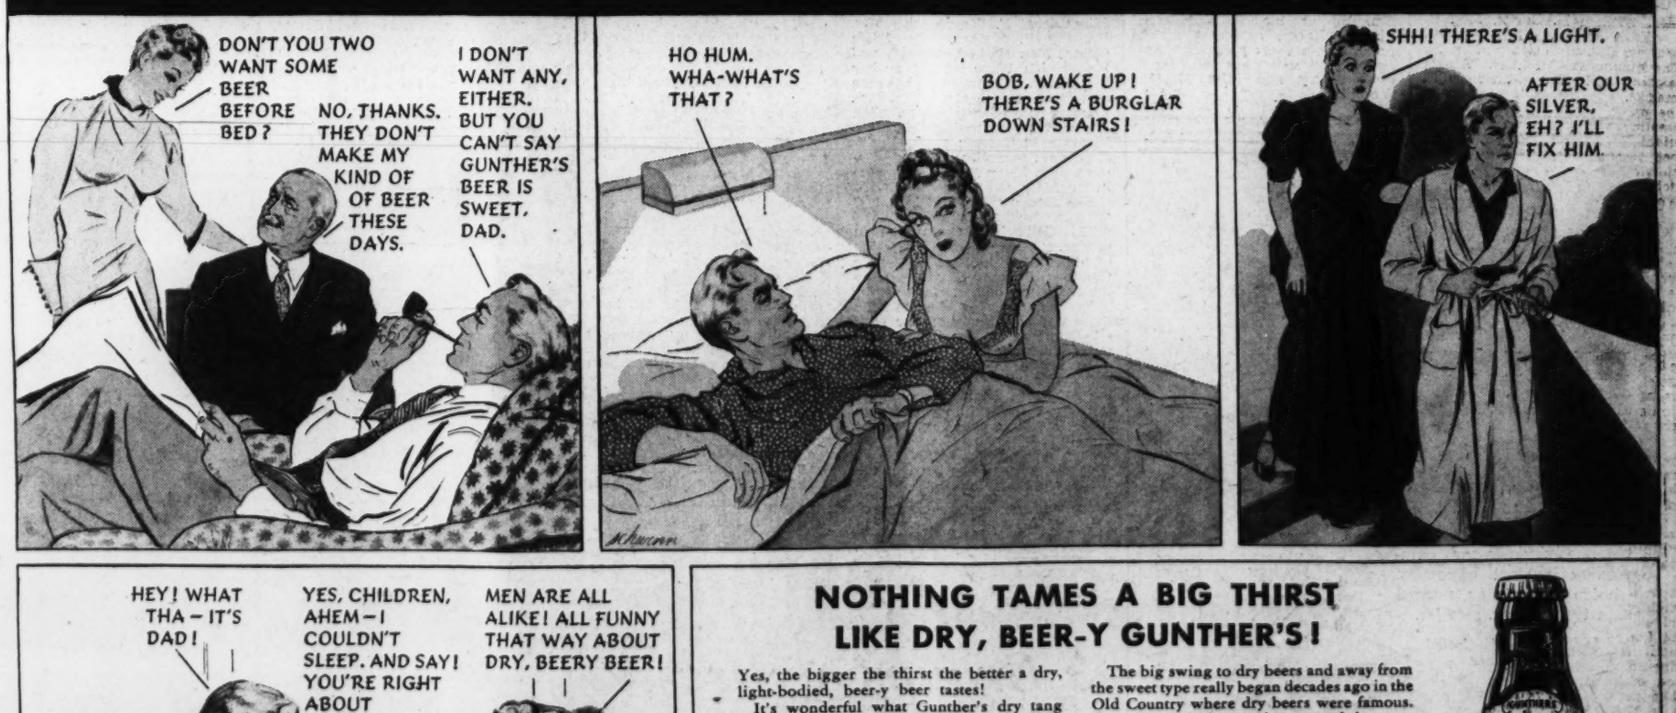
BOB BAGS A BURGLAR—or—Men are funny that way!



DON'T YOU TWO WANT SOME BEER BEFORE BED?
NO, THANKS. THEY DON'T MAKE MY KIND OF BEER THESE DAYS.
I DON'T WANT ANY, EITHER. BUT YOU CAN'T SAY GUNTHER'S BEER IS SWEET, DAD.
HO HUM. WHA-WHAT'S THAT?
SHH! THERE'S A LIGHT.
AFTER OUR SILVER, EH? I'LL FIX HIM.
HEY! WHAT THA—IT'S DAD!
MEN ARE ALL ALIKE! ALL FUNNY THAT WAY ABOUT DRY, BEERY BEER!

NOTHING TAMES A BIG THIRST
LIKE DRY, BEER-Y GUNTHER'S!

Yes, the bigger the thirst the better a dry, light-bodied, beer-y beer tastes!

It's wonderful what Gunther's dry tang does to a thirst. Nothing sweet about it. There's a refreshing tingle as the hoppy, sparkling beer goes down. And when it lands, you don't quickly get an uncomfortable "filled up" feeling, because Gunther's is light bodied.

After the first glass you'll lose your thirst, but you'll be glad you did have it.

To brew a completely satisfying, thirst quenching beer we use an unusually high percentage of choice Bohemian hops which give a flavor domestic hops alone can't approach. We brew the beer after an ancient formula and age it thoroughly. The result is a beer that is really dry, light bodied and beer-y — never sweet, never heavy bodied.

The big swing to dry beers and away from the sweet type really began decades ago in the Old Country where dry beers were famous. Here the swing was interrupted by prohibition, but repeal brought back dry beers again. They quickly became America's preference.

Here, Gunther's is known as the dry, beer-y beer. It's the only "Special Dry Lager" made in this section and the beer drinkers have recognized that fact by making it the outstanding favorite. They know not even the expensive imported beers are drier!

Try a glass of Gunther's Beer. Then you, too, will say: "Nothing tames a big thirst like dry, beer-y Gunther's."

"TELL ME WHAT YOU EAT AND—"

Robert Woods Bliss . . . baked oranges

One of the more irritating of the playground catchwords of my childhood was "Tell me what you eat and I'll tell you what you are" . . . I never believed it then, and after a good long look at what the notables of Washington eat, I believe it less.

• • • •

For example, the Senator Bill Borahs dote on a dish called marshmallow pudding, which includes (believe it or not!) half a pound of marshmallows, a cup of cream, half a cup of candied cherries and half a cup of candied pineapple, among other things. And that's what our foreign policy's made of.

• • • •

The Hugo Blacks, of the Supreme Court, are a whole-wheat waffle family, preferably via an electric waffle iron . . . (Any dissenting opinions?) . . . His late predecessor, William Howard Taft, who once reduced from 300 pounds to 235, liked a dessert composed mostly of a cup of powdered sugar and a dozen eggs; but deftly.

"—a recipe from the queen"

Among the cherished trophies of American diplomats are some of the recipes they've wangled from their royal and eminent hosts abroad. While at Stockholm Robert Woods Bliss, who also saw some strange dishes as Ambassador to the Argentine, learned to like baked oranges, which take 5½ hours to make; maybe he got the recipe from the Queen of Sweden.

• • • •

"Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed that he hath grown so great?" Likely as not it's bean soup; if you run into your Representative or Senator this summer ask him for the Capitol bean soup recipe, which is famous all over the world. A simple dish, but that's what Senators are made of.

• • • •

Quite appropriately, the aristocratic Senator Gerrys, who always remind me of the Faubourg St. Germain, are devoted to oysters baked in the shell and to guinea chicken venitienne, a recipe which begins "Have some tender guinea chickens." . . . That's the real trick; having some tender guinea chickens kicking around . . .

• • • •

One of the more recherche dishes eaten in Washington is the duck and orange salad of Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of New York's talented but bashful Representative . . . If you happen to have four seedless oranges and two cupfuls of cold duck, have a whirl with it . . . I think the Blooms got that recipe from the George Washingtons, an old family of suburban Washington.

"—take 18 geese"

The Blooms also have an amiable weakness for Stuffed Tomato Vera, named for their daughter, who used to be proud of her friendship with Mussolini until he turned faintly Teutonic . . . Tomato Vera is Kennebec salmon garnished with two anchovies in the form of a cross, which should reassure Benito. Or maybe not.

• • • •

When a foreign diplomat gives you a recipe, better analyze the quantities or you may end up with enough to feed everybody at the country club . . . They love recipes beginning "Take 18 geese . . ." or "Remove the whiskers from 10 sheep" . . . If you see four butcher boys struggling with a meat delivery at one of the embassies, carrying in several quarters of beef, you are safe in assuming that they're having six or eight in for lunch.

• • • •

I'm looking forward to tasting some of Mrs. Alben Barkley's potato rolls, now that the Senator's in the saddle for another six years . . . At the French Embassy they cook like chemists, measuring out 75 grams, two-tenths of a decileter or four-fifths of a gill . . . The glamorous Mrs. Gifford Pinchot thinks chestnuts can make almost any dish palatable . . . Dolly Gann believes in plenty of raisins in things . . . Alice Longworth, who once kept a straight face in front of the ill-mannered, unpredictable dowager queen of China, still likes things cooked in rice . . . But that's no clue to Mrs. Longworth.

Bay Ferry Hearing Is Set Tomorrow

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 15 (AP).—A hearing is scheduled in Circuit Court here Wednesday on whether a proposed Chesapeake Bay ferry line from Sandy Point to Kent Island is required by "public necessity and convenience."

Judge Linwood L. Clark is expected to rule on the Public Service Commission's findings and on the constitutionality of the 1935 act prohibiting establishment of a ferry within 20 miles of a proposed bay bridge.

Both sides have indicated the case would be taken to the Court of Appeals for final decision.

Ruling Today On Gallinger Building Plan

PWA-Financed Program Prepared by City Architect.

Ruhland to See Wyeth; Project Will Cost $1,325,000.

Plans for the PWA-financed improvement program for Gallinger Hospital to cost $1,325,000 were virtually completed yesterday by Municipal Architect Nathan C. Wyeth.

This morning he will seek approval of the architectural drawand plans from Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

Of prime importance is the $750,000 ward building, which the District Commissioners had labeled as "urgently needed," at the time they requested the loan from PWA Administrator Ickes.

This building, long sought by health department officials, is intended to relieve overcrowding and congestion at the hospital.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant Health Officer said yesterday construction of this new unit will begin early in the fall.

The second project for the hospital is a nurses home, funds for which will be taken from the $575,000 PWA allotment for both a home and another ward building.

It was pointed out, however, the plans were tentative and might require several conferences between the architect's office and the health department to iron out minor details.

Plans for the second ward building, which will further ease congestion in the hospital are rapidly rounding into shape, Wyeth said.

Veteran Office To Add Units At 19 Hospitals

Contracts totaling $8,689,000 have been awarded for new buildings at 19 Veterans' Administration hospitals throughout the country, Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, announced yesterday.

Construction to be paid for entirely with WPA funds, will begin at once. Satisfactory bids were received for all of the work, so awards were made in every instance the day after bids were opened, the administration said.

The structures already approved consist of neuro-psychiatric, general medical and domiciliciary buildings, which will add 4,810 beds to existing facilities. The program ultimately calls for an expenditure of nearly $5,000,000 more, bringing the total to $13,268,200.

Buildings contracted for are to be located in Alabama, California (2), Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont and West Virginia.

War Secretary's Aide Off on Air Survey of Alaska

Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, left here by airplane yesterday on the first lap of a flight to Alaska, where he will study the possibility of expanding the Army's air facilities.

Accompanying the War Department official was J. Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce. The two left in an Army plane piloted by iLeuts. Jesse Auton and William E. Hall.

Besides studying the aviation situation in Alaska, Johnson will consider the possibility of establishing a highway from Seattle to Fairbanks. He said yesterday that, by using airplanes to survey the route, such a highway could be rapidly constructed and would help attract tourists to Alaska.

U. S. Buildings To Be Razed to Beautify Street

Structures to Be Torn Down to Aid Appearance of Triangle.

The Department of Agriculture greenhouses and plant industry inspection buildings on Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets are to be razed to beautify the Federal triangle, it was announced yesterday.

President Roosevelt and the Public Works Administration have approved a PWA program for replacing the greenhouses with new ones to be built at the department's research center at Beltsville, Md., according to H. A. Nelson, secretary of the division of budget and finance at the department.

The buildings which front Constitution avenue for two blocks, will be torn down in from 15 to 18 months, Nelson said.

The inspection division now in a small frame building, will be moved to Hoboken, N. J. Nelson explained there had been agitation for several years to have the division closer to New York, the chief port of entry.

Traffic Victim's Rites Tomorrow

Services for Mrs. Marie Litteri, 35, of 1301 Somerset place northwest, victim of a Baltimore traffic accident Saturday, will be held at the Church of the Nativity, tomorrow at 8:30 a. m. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Litteri, her 14-year-old son Eugene, and her daughter, Angelina, 11, were visiting in Baltimore at the time of the accident. Besides her children, she is survived by her husband, Christopher Litteri.

Lieut. Col. Jones Named Army Staff Instructor

Lieut. Col. Albert M. Jones, U. S. A., of Washington, has been assigned to duty as instructor at the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., the War Department announced yesterday.

He will be relieved September 1 from detail as infantry instructor with the Massachusetts National Guard at Boston.

Farmer's 'Vision' Comes True; Washington Is City of Dreams

Twelve Years Ago Walter Green 'Saw' a Beautiful Country and Met It's King; Yesterday He Saw Capital and Glimpsed President.

Twelve years ago Walter M. Green, 48, of Albemarle, N. C., father of 12, had a "vision."

In it, he scaled a sheer wall, and finding a magic vehicle conveniently nearby, he climbed in and rode off through the most beautiful countryside he ever saw. Then he entered a most wondrous city, a city of marble buildings and sparkling green lawns. And the king of this country suddenly came by, and Green shook hands with his majesty.

This week Green realized his dream (so he earnestly told a Post reporter).

Leaving home for the first time in his life, accompanied by his 64-year-old mother, a brother and two nieces, he managed to urge his auto over the high hills, and when he passed through the Shenandoah Valley he knew that his vision was coming true.

And Washington—Washington was the city of his dream. He had never seen Washington before; he had never seen a moving picture in his whole life.

Do you scoff, you cynics? Yesterday this farmer-visionary met the "king" of the Nation. He was standing at the corner of Third street and Constitution avenue when President Roosevelt rode by.

Now while the President did not get out to shake hands with Green, they did wave to one another.

And the vision was fulfilled.

Curious Drivers Jam Road to See 'Safety Lighting'

Montgomery County's indirect lighting system on the extended New Hampshire avenue—installed as an experiment in highway safety—has created a new traffic problem.

Hundreds of motorists jam the highway nightly to see the lights which have been erected on either side of the street from University Lane to the District line, a distance of 2 miles.

The "lights" are illuminated from the headlights of autos by means of three reflectors set on 4-foot poles 100 feet apart.

U. S. Set to Buy Old C. & O. Canal For Two Millions

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 15 (AP).—Unless objections are entered by September 9, the United States will acquire for $2,000,000 the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, built in the heyday of the canal building for $11,071,176.

Circuit Judge Frank G. Wagaman today signed an order nisi after the three receivers for the defunct canal company reported the offer of the United States Department of Interior, which contemplates reconstructing portions of the canal for recreational use. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has offered $100,000 additional for certain rights, the receivers told the court.

If no exceptions to the sale are reported it will be approved subject to ratification by the United States District Court of the District of Columbia.

Americanism Goal of Ahepa, U. S. Greeks' Convention Told

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Aug. 15.—Opening the fifteenth annual convention of the American Hellenic Educational Progressive Association here today, William G. Helis, consul general of Greece in New Orleans, said it stood for Americanism.

"The organization, which is nonsectarian and nonpolitical and stands for the highest in brotherhood," Helis said, "is composed mostly of members who are Greek by birth but Americans by choice with all advocating the highest ideals of Americanism and good citizenship."

V. I. Chebithes, of Washington, D. C., supreme president of the organization, presided at the opening session and Dmetrios Sicilianos, Minister of Greece to the United States, expressed thanks for the welcome given the delegates in New Orleans.

Chebithes said special interest had been taken by all Hellenics in this convention because it was in New Orleans before the Revolutionary War that the first Greeks landed in America.

"We have been American for many years," he said, "I for 32, but we have been Greeks for 20,000 years and are instilled with the same love and freedom as our heroes of yore . . . We have grown to love the principles of Americans, their ways of life, government and their spirit of democracy."

Lewis Indorsed By A.F.L. Union For Senate Race

Resolution Recommends Him as 100 Per Cent New Dealer.

Representative "D.vey" J. Lewis (Democrat), Maryland, was indorsed last night for the Democratic senatorial nomination by the Central Labor Union, an A. F. L. organization.

A resolution recommending Lewis as "100 per cent behind the New Deal program of the President" was adopted by a majority vote only after some opponents had voiced belief from the floor the Maryland Representative was unduly friendly toward the C. I. O.

Although it was generally admitted Lewis was more acceptable to labor than his principal rival, Senator Millard Tydings, some delegates held that the union should indorse no candidate rather than one with alleged C. I. O. leanings.

The resolution pointed out President William Green, of the A. F. of L., had approved Lewis' candidacy and that the Representative "has for years supported and fought for legislation that was to the benefit of all working people."

The resolution was brought before the central union by J. G. Forsyth, of Machinists Local 193, James A. Holden, of Milk Drivers Local 246, and Harry J. Thompson, of Brewery and Yeast Workers 48.

John Locher, president of the central union, was chosen without a dissenting vote to be delegate to the A. F. of L. convention in October.

The union also adopted a resolution asking the A. F. of L. to increase the staff of its "legislative department."

General Upshur Praises Marines' Shooting Ability

Special Dispatch to The Post

Camp Ritchie, Md., Aug. 15.—"The fundamental importance and value of the Marine is his shooting ability," declared Brig. Gen. William P. Upshur, director of the Marine Corps Reserve, in an impromptu talk to the Fifth Battalion which he inspected today.

The battalion had reveille at 4 a. m., and was on the firing line at 6 a. m. It had completed its work at 2 p. m. During almost the entire period Gen. Upshur was with the battalion evidencing a keen interest in the scores made by the reservists.

He also was guest of honor at the officers' noon mess.

Interior Dept. Brunettes Win Beauty Honors

Gentlemen may prefer blondes, but more than 1,000 members of the Interior Department Recreation Association who went cruising down the moon-full Potomac last night elected three brunettes as the most popular.

The "Miss Popularity," chosen after several weeks of campaigning and electioneering in the Interior Department, is Grace Seymour Hazard, a brunette who stands 4 feet 11¾ inches. She has brown eyes, loves sports and is a native Washingtonian.

Brunette Jo Oswald, who has worked three years in PWA accounting, took second place, and Brunette Dorothy Grimm, of the PWA Legal Division, had third honors. Miss Hazard brought home a gold wrist watch; Miss Oswald, a bouquet of flowers and as the river boat docked the ceremonies were ending with a promise from Master of Ceremonies S. M. Barrett that Miss Grimm would, in time, receive a suitable prize.

Miss Hazard, who won with 76 votes to 38 and 35 for the runners-up, respectively, attended Central High School and Temple and was employed in the Bureau of Standards before coming to Interior's Office of Indian Affairs four years ago. Miss Grimm came here from Baltimore and Miss Oswald from Montana.

There were 46 aspirants, or, to put it more modestly, the names of 46 girls were entered in the contest.

Franck Symphony District's Favorite

Of two works of the standard symphonic repertoire—the Cesar Franck Symphony in D Minor and Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony—Washington audiences prefer the Franck composition, the National Symphony management announced yesterday.

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the symphony, invited concert-goers to choose which of the two works would be included in the final "Sunset Symphony" program at the Watergate tomorrow night. Of over 1,000 ballots cast, the masterpiece of the Belgian-French composer received 678 votes.

Carola Coya, world-famous Spanish dancer will solo on the program in six dances.

Applicants Refused Aid to Conserve Money, Says Director.

Reduced Appropriation Forces Cut in Family Allotments.

A gloomy outlook for the District's destitute was forecast yesterday when Public Welfare officials reported 2,074 applicants for general public assistance had been refused aid during the last month, because of lack of money.

It was pointed out this was the first month of the fiscal year in which the Public Assistance Division operated under the $900,000 appropritaion for general public assistance.

The appropriation was described in a report by M. Alice Hill, assistance director as being "far below the lowest amount previously estimated by welfare authorities as necessary for this purpose."

Individual Allotments Reduced.

Not only was the total appropriation reduced, but the amount of assistance to any one family was limited to $60 a month, Miss Hill said.

In addition, the lack of funds necessitated a reduction of the working staff, thus slowing up investigations and making it virtually impossible to keep abreast of the work, she said.

Only 1,675 cases received general public assistance during July, Miss Hill reported. In June assistance was given to 2,237 cases and last July to 3,216 cases.

This represents a decrease of 25 per cent between June and July and a cut of nearly 50 per cent since July, 1937.

A total of 532 cases was closed, of which 221 were listed as dropped because of shortage of funds. Actually this number was probably greater because only very general classifications were made, so, a case may have been closed for many reasons but listed under only one of those reasons, Miss Hill explained.

Families Get Less.

All families given assistance were put on a reduced budget and maximum grants could not exceed $60 a month with the result that average grants for general public assistance dropped from $26.27 in June to $23.93 in July.

Miss Hill explained the average family of four persons had to do with the barest necessities on the monthly allowance.

Due to the decreased staff a record of all those turned away from the office was impossible to make, she said. Furthermore, it was impossible to interview all persons who came to the offices.

Corrigan Staked All on Job Hopes, Cudahy Declares

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—John Cudahy, United States Minister to Ireland, said on his arrival from Europe today he still was astounded by Douglas Corrigan's flight to Dublin last month.

"Why his plane was nothing but an orange crate covered with grease. I wouldn't fly across the street with it!" said Cudahy.

"I think he planned his flight well. He staked everything in the hope he could become a pilot with an airline or head of the mechanical department of some aviation manufacturing organization," the diplomat added.

After a day in New York, the envoy will go to Washington to report to the State Department, then to Milwaukee, his home, to spend the remainder of his vacation before returning to Dublin.

Change in Policy Is Rumored As the Gayety Has Face Lifted

Old Ninth Street Landmark Installs Sound Equipment During Reseating and Redecoration; Gracie Comes a Cropper; Kaliski Moves Up; 'Antoinette' Again.

A CONSIDERABLE change in the complexion of Washington's Ninth street amusements may occur any day now. The Gayety Theater is having its face lifted and undergoing a few major operations that may result in any one—or two—of a number of things.

BELL.

Without fanfare or ostentation, old Col. James Jeremiah Lake, the Chesterfieldian Beau Brummel of Ninth street and the sports arenas, and his associates have been going about the business of revamping the Gayety until those glimpsing her casually at the present writing wouldn't know the old girl. The front of the theater has been entirely done over and inside the auditorium they not only have been slapping paint all over the place on both sides of the footlights, but also have ripped out the time-honored old seats and have installed—or are installing—a complete new equipment of upholstered chairs. It is significant, too, that modern, motion picture sound equipment has played a part in the rehabilitation. There is a reason for all this, but no one, at the moment—including the good colonel himself—knows quite what it is. That is to be decided within the next day or two.

The installation of that sound equipment has given rise to a persistent rumor that the Gayety, long dedicated to frivolity and feminine pulchritude, will launch its new season under a motion picture policy, with the girls-and-music shows, "in the flesh," coming along later after the circuit has been a little more tightly organized. Then, of course, there is the counter-rumor that this is all a lot of the old malarky and that the Gayety, as usual, will open around Labor Day with the customary "comedians, display artistes and beauty chorus."

A personal guess would be on the side of the early picture policy and later reversion to burlesk, as Col. Jimmy likes to spell it.

Whatever the new season's policy—and it will be announced this week, according to the present outlook—it will be housed in a "new Gayety" that will shine like a Christmas toy and be infinitely more comfortable than it has been since a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, as you might say.

Anyhow, there it is—take it or leave it.

It must be that Gracie Fields, in "We're Going to Be Rich," didn't catch on at Loew's Columbia as emphatically as she deserved. "We're Going to Be Rich," in which Victor McLaglen is costarred with Britain's top music hall artiste and film star, and Brian Donlevy is cast in the next most important male role, comes off tonight and will be succeeded tomorrow morning by a repeat F street engagement of "Love Finds Andy Hardy," in which Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis S. Stone, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker, Gene Reynolds and the rest of the Hardy family and their friends score the hit of their comparatively young screen lives.

Without detracting one whit from the superior excellence of "Love Finds Andy Hardy," it may be said that "We're Going to Be Rich" is not so feeble a picture as its brief run would seem to indicate. It is a rough and ready, rowdy sort of a "frontier" opus, to be sure, but it has its moments. One of the funniest of them, as Miss Dorothea Lewis agreed when she brought in her review last Friday, is the one in which Victor McLaglen returns to his corner during the climacteric ring battle, cut to ribbons by the bare fists of the "Cape Town Killer," and is exhorted by his handlers to go out and win. "But I can't see him," says Vic. "Oh, that's all right, Dobby," encourages his chief second, "just go out and 'it him from memory!"

The peculiarly mercurial workings of the most fluid and migratory of the industries are at it again.

Joseph Kaliski, manager in the Washington territory for Gaumont British Pictures, is the latest popular executive of "Film Row" to receive his orders from the high command to advance into a sector up nearer the front line. On Thursday of this week, Mr. and Mrs. Kaliski will leave Washington for Pittsburgh, where Joe will be territorial manager for his company in a larger field. That is right down Mrs. Kaliski's alley, in a manner of speaking, since Pittsburgh is her home town and she is the proprietress of a prosperous employment agency there.

Joe has been in the Washington field for five years, having come to the Capital first as branch manager for E. W. Hammon's Educational Film Co. ("The Spice of the Program"). For the past four years he has been Washington Branch Exchange manager for G. B. He and "Min" will be missed from the usual haunts of showmen in the Capital, but will join many old friends in Pittsburgh, "Mike" Cullen and Charlie Kurtzman among them.

Mr. Kaliski will be succeeded temporarily in this city by William Barrett, field operative for G. B.

After nine grueling days of indoor rehearsals, members of the "Going Native" chorus are to be given a breath of fresh air today—mixed with a little more hard work. When the Wilson Line steamer City of Washington, leaves its wharf this afternoon for its regular 3 o'clock trip down the Potomac, Production Manager Gene Ford and Dance Director Chester Hale's right hand, La Verne Gundry, will be aboard with the chorus for an al fresco workout. This sixth annual edition of the all-local revue opens on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater this Friday.

While the cavorting coryphees are kicking all the rigging off the City of Washington, the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks will be perched in the air-cooled (I hope) private projection room in the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange taking a gander at that company's production of "Alexander's Ragtime Band." This is the "cavalcade of Irving Berlin song hits" in which Alice Faye, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche are said to take on new luster. They are saying the same thing about Mr. Berlin's tunes

We shall see what we shall see.

Speaking of theaters and the new season, as we were back there near the starting line, is the Belasco preparing to light up again? The reason I ask is that a pretty postage card of Norma Shearer's home in Beverly Hills, Calif., has just come to hand from Jack Thoman, manager of the Belasco for the past several seasons and now evidently in Hollywood, bearing this message: "Will see you soon." Write your own ticket.

If you have been wondering how the Schnickelfritz Band, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle, is able to produce such an amazing diversity of clatteration with only six members, maybe I can help you out. Any of the six boys can get music out of practically anything he picks up. The band's present instrumentation is as follows:

Freddie "Schnickelfritz" Fisher, the little fellow with the bouncing hat, accounts for clarinet, Jews harp, saxophone, harmonica, potato whistle and washboard; Nels Laakos plays cornet, mouth harp and slide whistle; Stanley Fritss, tootles the trombone, barytone horn, jug and rattles a washboard; Chief McKelroy presides at the drums and vibraphone; Paul Cooper, at the piano and gas pipes and Charles Koenig oom-pahs the Sousaphone (bass horn) and slaps the daylights out of bull fiddle.

As one ruminates upon the superlative merits of "Marie Antoinette," 36 hours after its Sabbath morning preview, the conviction grows that here is an extravagantly superfine celluloid creation. There are at least four factors in its structure that leave an indelible impression—the cast's brilliant acting, Woody Van Dyke's flawless direction, Herbert Stohtart's helpful, but unobtrusive score and assets with a magnificent production.

I already have committed myself to the statement that Norma Shearer is the screen's foremost actress, on the testimony of her present performance in the title role. Robert Morley's portrayal of Louis XVI is no less effective. Charles Laughton had better begin paying attention to his "p's" and "q's," for this fellow countryman of his, Mr. Morley, is right on his heels. The makes Louis XVI an utterly sympathetic figure of pathetically bungling heroism by a superb display of quiet artistry.

But we had better not get started on this "Antoinette" business again, because, if we do, there'll be no end to the darn thing!

Laughter and Romance on Way to Local Screens

AMONG NEXT WEEK'S FILM STARS.

The Post's New Yorker

THIS IS ONE of the stories which wasn't included in "The Great Ziegfeld." . . . Seymour Felix, who conceived and directed the dances in the picture, had been Ziegfeld's dance director. Felix came to one of the Follies rehearsals rather repressed, and related his woes to the glorifier. "My sister-in-law just passed away," he informed, and her dying wish was that I take care of her son. The Children's Society stepped in and refused permission. They're taking the boy away from me, because they insist that a theatrical environment is very bad for youngsters. Their representative is coming here soon, to discuss it with me." Ziegfeld promised to set everything to rights, and agreed to speak to the representative. She arrived and was ushered into Ziggy's office. A moment later, the producer said: "Excuse me, but I must phone my home." . . . For ten minutes thereafter, that representative heard him speak to Billie Burke, asking tenderly: "And how is little Patricia? . . . Did she get her milk? . . . Has she done her school work?" . . . The woman was convinced that a theatrical environment would not impugn the morals of a child, and the society's objections were withdrawn . . . She never learned that Ziegfeld hadn't phoned Billie Burke—that, instead, the phone had been connected to a switch downstairs—and the person on the other end of the wire was Sidney, his valet . . .

A BROKER AT Lindy's was examining the stock reports last night, and spied Goodman Ace. "Tell me," he asked, "did the Governor commute any death sentences this month?" . . . "No," Ace replied, . . . "You with your General Electric . . ."

SAM GOLDWYN, the producer, invested almost $800.000 in bringing "The Children's Hour" to the screen. After considerable difficulty with the Hays office, the change of title to "These Three" and surmounting a multitude of obstacles, the picture was ready to be filmed. On the first day of the shooting, however, Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon decided to quit, for fear that the children in the story would steal their starring thunder. Miss Oberon relented—but Goldwyn—though he tried to be gentle and calm—couldn't placate Miss Hopkins. "Don't worry," an assistant assured him, "I will talk to her alone and adjust everything." . . . Goldwyn, who is nearsighted, stepped through a dividing partition and then satisfied that he was alone and out of hearing, exploded as he gazed at the partition, behind which sat Miss Hopkins. "Sam, Sam," someone finally told the producer, "that's not a door. It's a curtain!"

HOWARD DEITZ, the lyricist, and Arthur Schwartz, the tunesmith, have united to become one of the most successful songwriting teams in the American musical comedy field. As usual, the question arose—as it always has—since songwriting time immemorial, as to whose contribution is more important . . . Deitz and Schwartz, in writing some new songs, went to a hotel room and pounded the piano all night. Complaining neighbors caused their having to move to another hotel, then another and another . . . "I can't understand these people," Schwartz complained. "Why can't they bear such excellent music?" . . . "See?" Dietz countered, "they never complain about the lyrics!"

IT WAS LOU HOLTZ who reminded me that Nick the Greek hasn't been seen in his usual Broadway haunts for a number of months . . . In the gambler's hey-dey, Nick arrived in town on December 19, carting a bankroll of $1,200.000 . . . Four days later, December 23, his dice game activities had left him with only $100,000 remaining—and Lou was one of the many who had profited . . . "Well, we live and learn," was Holtz's comment at the time. "The boys learned that Santa Claus is a Greek!"

W. C. Fields had a Chinese houseboy at his Hollywood home. Last week he apologized to the star for permitting commercial problems to intrude upon Fields' comber reveries. He had been discussing, however, the matter of salary with the Japanese houseboys employed in that area. "They tellee me they get fi' dollas more a week," he informed. "So I wanee raise" . . . Fields eyed his servant, and sidemouthed: "Well, isn't it worth $5 a week to you not to be Japanese?"

HOWARD DEITZ accompanied Joe Schenck, who owns Agua Caliente, for a week-end at that sportsman's paradise. On the way back, Deitz questioned Schenck about the profits made from the gambling halls there, where he had seen thousands of customers play . . . "You'd be surprised," Schenck informed, "but not many go for much, and sometimes the house shows a loss. It averages up—and in the long run, one sucker is all we need. For instance, this week-end the profit was only $3,000 . . . Deitz coughed, and changed the subject. Schenck still isn't aware that his guest, in that week-end play at Agua Caliente, had lost —exactly $3,000. . . .

Olney Theater

Comparisons being as inevitable as they are odious, let it be said for the sake of getting it over with that the original stage play "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," in which Bert Lytell is starring on Panjandrum Cochran's Olneysian stage this week is a fine play and that the film version of same play is a fine film.

Without any possible shadow of doubt, "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" is a crackerjack play. It has that radium-rare quality which delights all theatergoers, originality.

For that is what this clever story of the doctor who becomes interested in the physical and mental quirks of criminals has. To test his theories at first hand, he becomes a criminal himself and everyone can realize the joy which must have come to Author Barre Lyndon when he bethought him of this unhackneyed situation. He has realized the comic possibilities inherent in the situation: A methodical doctor mixing up with a strange group of witty folk to whom Lady What's-her-name's heirlooms are "ice" and to whom tonsils are something one has out when a nipper. Will a doctor make friends with all his new and not so good companions, will he emerge from his experiment fit for research or reform? Londoners enjoyed Mr. Lyndon's enquiring doctor so much that for well over two years the Savoy Theater flashed his memorably unusual name. Sir Cedric Hardwicke played in New York for a successful though not so lengthy run.

And now at the Olney this week we have veteran star Bert Lytell essaying the interesting role. Down to earth is the way Lytell plays him, seeming to exude tobacco and tweed in a pleasant, unsophisticated fashion. He is a doctor, not of Oxford or Cambridge necessarily, but one who has worked his way up in the world; not sauve or smoothly swank in white tie and tails. We like him that way, frank and natural and altogether Bert Lytell.

Gordon Richards does a neat piece of work as "Pal" Green, a beer drinking confederate of the robbing band. With a cockney accent and a rolling of the eyes, he gave the audience as much pleasure with his comedy as with his evidently enjoyable beer drinking scene. Lesle Denison continued the fine work he has been doing with the company as Benny Kellerman, a lean and anxious fence for the stolen goods. As "Badger" Lee, a weak old criminal with heart trouble, Henry Notman gave a finely etched portrayal to the small, but immensely effective part.

As Daisy, the moll of these underworld boys, Zolya Talma, another of Director Vivian's standbys, was hard and bitter-looking, improving as her part in the proceedings wore on. Margaret Wilson was a youthful and amazed nurse at all of her doctor's peculiar activities. Robert Lynn was a blustering "Oakie" and the cast was completed by Frank Collette, John Vance, Howard Furguson and Gerald Hess, doubling as Sergt. Bates and "Tug" Wilson.

Altogether it's a nifty and original play at Olney this week, proudly boasting actor Lytell of stage, screen, radio and vaudeville's well-loved and much missed one acter, "The Valiant."

Films in Open Score Bulls-Eye At Mt. Vernon

UniqueAutomobile Theater Below Alexandria Has Gala Inaugural.

By Nelson B. Bell

A new form of motion-picture presentation came to the remote outskirts of Washington last night, with the opening of the E. M. Loew's new Mount Vernon Open Air Theater, for automobile patronage, on the Richmond highway, Route No. 1, 3 miles below Alexandria, Va.

Signalized by music by the American Legion 40-piece band, the distribution of corsage bouquets to feminine patrons and an overflow attendance, last night's inaugural presaged wide popularity for this new type of al fresco entertainment. It was estimated by the management that between 500 and 700 cars were turned away between the hours of 7:30 p. m. and closing, for lack of space within the inclosure, which has a frontage of 650 feet on the highway and a depth of 725 feet.

The premonitory perplexities of wary motorists, unfamiliar with the conduct of this type of "theater," all were smoothed away by the efficient service of a management and staff experienced in the operation of this type of enterprise.

Patrons enter the Mount Vernon at the north side of the highway frontage and drive out the south. Box-office attendants service each car, without the occupants leaving their seats, and an "usher" mounts the running board and guides the driver to his preferred location. The cars are parked in straight lines, facing the screen, across nine ramps, with ample clearance between for entrance and egress. The ramps are merely slight inclines that elevate the forward ends of the cars, placing the occupants on a direct line of vision with the screen, 40 by 60 feet in size, set in a "screen house" that towers to a height of 72 feet. Cars desiring to leave while the property is still in darkness for the projection of the picture, are guided out by the ushers as they were upon entering.

Excellent Projection.

The projection booth of the new theater is sunk in the center of the third ramp from the screen and the picture is projected upward, instead of downward, as in the conventional inclosed theater. It is equipped with special, high-power simplex projection machines and houses its own generator. The projection last night was excellent, the screen images being clear-cut and distinct, without distortion or flicker.

Sound is controlled by a graduated series of giant invisible horns that provide abundant amplification to cover the entire parking area with audibility. Control boxes are pitched at both sides and at the rear of the expansive lot. Retiring rooms for men and women are conviently located adjoining the projection booth on the third ramp. These ramps, by the way, should not be confused with the steep inclines such as are found in metropolitan parking garages. They are merely terraces that offer no driving or parking difficulties.

Last night's feature attraction on the screen was Paramount's production of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," co-starring Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert, with Edward Everett Horton leading the support, under the direction of Ernest Lubitsch. Washington already is familiar with this breezy subject. It was supplemented by a "Three Stooges" short-reel comedy and a "Paramount Pictorial." Beginning Thursday, the chief feature of the bill will be "Her Jungle Love," featuring Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland and Lynne Overman. Hereafter, programs will be changed each Sunday and Thursday.

To Be Beautified.

There are still the finishing touches to be put on Mr. Loew's new property, which is the latest addition to a chain of such open air theaters that is gradually stretching across the country from its starting point in New England. The driveways are still to be permanently surfaced and the grounds to be landscaped with lawns, fountains, trees and shrubbery. The screen stands at the highway end of the lot and the frontage, entrance and exit are brilliantly illuminated by flood lights and Neon signs.

A large detail of Virginia State police last night expertly handled a volume of traffic that should assure Mr. Loew, Manager Lasky and Publicist Gould, the executive heads of the new project, that they have hit upon an innovation that will prove popular with Capital amusement-seekers. They estimated last evening that approximately 80 per cent of their patronage attended under D. C. license plates.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 15.—Looks as though Walter Wanger, after making Hedy LaMarr a great star for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will be the fall guy. Metro was just about to let her contract slide, when Walter engaged her for "Algiers," with the understanding that he'd get her for another picture. Now, the studio say, nothing doing—they have five lined up for her, and Walter can whistle. It seems they never got over the fact that they had to pay Wanger $150,000 for Boyer when he payed Napoleon with Greta Garbo. Won't it be fun when the producers form their own Guild to protect themselves against each other?

HEDDA HOPPER

'Tis said that Hedy's playing opposite Clark Gable in "New Orleans." If those two ever get together they'll burn up the celluloid.

Witnessed my first electrocution, which was horribly realistic, even though it was only for a picture.

Jimmy Cagney as a cop killer gests his just deserts in "Angels With Dirty Faces," yet you can't help feeling sorry for him as he steps out of his cell and starts the solemn walk past other prisoners to the Death House. Dressed in black, left trouser leg slit to the knee, he walks beside Pat O'Brien, portraying a priest, who sticks with him to the end.

You won't actually see the electric chair on the screen, but you'll witness the dimming of electric lights, which is supposed to mean the full current is being shot through the criminal. It's a popular belief that prison lights go down when an electrocution is on, which isn't true and never has been. The current for the chair is on a separate circuit. You see, they take no chances. But by this method they visualize it on the screen. Hope my duties as a columnist will never require me to see the real thing.

Walter Gene Towne, on leaving Selznick studio, stopped to give a hitchhiker a lift. Before getting in, the man asked, "Have you a radio in the car?" "No," answered Gene. "Then Ill wait for the next one. This is the time of my favorite program and I don't propose to miss it."

Eddie Robinson has been playing so many gloomy parts lately that the studio thinks it would be a good idea to let him play Napoleon, but with a slight change in history. As a fadeout have him win the battle of Waterloo. What Ho! 'Twould start another revolution.

They bought the life of Al Capone for Robinson. It's well named—"Hell's Pennies."

Contrary to rumors that Deanna Durbin has gone high hat and been difficult to work with, she's done overtime, and with a high fever, until she collapsed on the set. This is the fourth collapse she's had since the picture started.

A cable from Roger Marchetti from Italy says he had completed a deal with Scalera Films to start ten pictures the end of September, using all Hollywood talent, to be paid in American money, tax free. They'll pay anything for Joan Bennett, Italy's favorite blonde. Bet Connie will gnash her teeth when she hears that.

Luise Rainer will definitely do a New York play. Don't believe she'll suffer the fate of the Freddie Marches at the hands of the critics, as she was a riot in Vienna before she ever hit the screen.

Paulette Goddard has tested for a part in "Dramatic School" at Metro. Wonder what became of the stock company in the East?"

Clark Gable has traded that special-bodied buggy of his for a Ford 8. It was too flashy, too easy to follow.

Glen Echo Park

Week-end visitors continue to swell the attendance records at Glen Echo Park. Dancers are captivated by the music of Dave McWilliams and his band, voted by all and sundry the best that ever came through the Union Station.

Hot weather is proving a fine partner for the Crystal Pool, as the crowds of swimmers over Saturday and Sunday went straight as the crow flies to its cooling water. The "World Cruise" is still drawing them in by the hundreds, and the new streamlined dodgem cars and waterway canal ticket sellers certainly cannot complain about business.

Coaster dips, whip, pretzel and carrousel also went on their merry way, with pleasure seekers standing in line, waiting for a chane to be thrilled.

As is usual over week-ends, the shady picnic grounds were well filled with family parties, who not only wanted to cool off, but had a mind for Glen Echo's unique entertainment as well.

Speaking of Trades.

It pains us to report that Clark Griffith's reputation as a baseball trader has been dimmed somewhat in recent seasons. Or hadn't you noticed? Anyway, the Old Fox has not distinguished himself of late with his dealings on the baseball mart.

POVICH.

There is, for example, the case of Buck Newsom and that one-hit game he pitched the other day. Newsom, you remember, used to be a Washington pitcher. Clark Griffith traded him off along with Ben Chapman for Wesley and Rick Ferrell and Mel Almada. That was only last summer. At this writing, the Nats have only Rick Ferrell's catching to show for that deal. Wes Ferrell was fired outright and Almada was held in such low esteem that he was traded off for 34-year-old Sammy West.

The Nats would like to have Newsom back. Any guy who can win 13 games with that crew of misfits known as the St. Louis Browns must be considerable pitcher. And in many respects, that one-hit game by Newsom was quite the finest pitching performance of the season.

Newsom pitched that one-hitter against no less than the Detroit Tigers, one of the better hitting clubs in baseball. And he struck out 12, to set a new season's record for wholesale whiffings in the American League. Johnny Vander Meer pitched two no-hitters, to be sure, but against who? The Boston Bees who, in baseball parlance, couldn't hit the ground with a fistful of gravel; and the Brooklyn Dodgers who rarely startle anybody with their hitting.

Remember Mel Almada?

And there is the case, too, of Mel Almada. The Nats traded him because he couldn't hit. But there must have been some mistake about that. Because the other day he just concluded a streak in which he had hit safely in 29 consecutive games. Almada's average zoomed from .246 with Washington to .324 with the Browns. And at this writing he is outhitting every outfielder on the Washington Club.

However, as we type this, we are operating from the advantage of the second guess. Unlike us, Griffith had only one. He was acting, he thought, for the best interests of the team when he traded off Newsom and Almada. And at the time there was little doubt but what he was. The common reaction was, as far as Newsom and Almada were concerned, good riddance.

With Washington, Newsom established one transcendant fact: He was a rank in-and-outer. And the Red Sox discovered that, too, and when the opportunity to trade him for Joe Vosmik presented itself, they traded Newsom with great alacrity and no immediate regrets.

And Almada. At the time he was traded by the Nats, he was a colossal joke as a hitter. Even his superb fielding could not offset his batting deficiencies. He refused to stand up to pitching and displayed a timidity that had a demoralizing effect on the rest of the team. Bucky Harris didn't want Almada around. But at St. Louis, the Mexican is a man transformed. He's standing up there at the plate and lunging into pitching and at this writing is one of the better ball players in the league.

Newsom has been a ball player who gets around. He wore the uniform of the Dodgers and the Cubs before he moved into the American League. In the American, he started out with the Browns, moved to the Nats, thence to the Red Sox and back to the Brown. And there are indications that before the 1939 season opens he will be on the move again.

Yankees Eyeing Newsom.

The Yankees want Buck Newsom and whom the Yankees want they usually get. In fact, Newsom came within a whisper of becoming a Yankee just before the trading limit on June 15. Business Manager Ed Barrow, of the Yanks, was all for the deal which would have involved the transfer of Lefty Gomez to the Browns, but Manager Joe McCarthy stomped down with a heavy foot on the trade.

But the Yankees' pitching this year is not such that McCarthy would be happy to carry it into next season without added strength. He is fond of Newsom's kind of pitching and has Ruppert's fat check book at his disposal. And the Browns, deep in the red, need Ruppert's money. With the Yanks prepared to go as high as $50,000 for Bashful Buck, he undoubtedly will be seen in New York uniform next summer.

But we started out talking about Griffith's reputation as a trader. He came by it honestly. His habit of trading spavined old performers even up for talented young athletes in the very blush of youth made him a figure to be feared in the winter trading sessions. Caveat Emptor, whatever that means, was the watchword of all who conquered their timidity to the extent of having dealings with the Old Fox.

Griffith virtually traded the Nats into two of the three pennants they won in the American League. In 1925, he traded $15,000 of his cash for a couple of pitchers named Stanley Covelskie and Dutch Ruether. When all other clubs passed up this pair as a washed-up duo, Griff bought 'em for the waiver price of $7,500 each.

A Pair of Fair Pitchers.

He was reckoning on the fact that in Mike Martin he had the best trainer in the business. If anybody could massage life into the ancient arms of Covey and Ruether Martin could. And that is what he did. All that Coveleskie did was to lead all the league's pitchers in 1925. Ruether didn't do quite so well. The best that he could do was to develop into the league's best southpaw. They virtually won the pennant for the Nats.

The most memorable trade by Griffith was probably his stunt in reclaiming Buddy Myer from the Boston Red Sox in the winter of 1928. He turned over five players to the Red Sox for Myer. None of the five lasted the season out and Griffith, in effect, gave up nothing for Myer.

It was in 1933, however, that Griffith made his most spectacular trades. He went into the winter meeting with his young manager, Joe Cronin, and actually built by trades the team that brought him the pennant. Within the space of three days he acquired five players who weren't even on the block. He picked up Earl Whitehill and Jack Russell from Cleveland and Walter Stewart, Goose Goslin and Fred Schulte from the Browns. We don't remember who Griffith released in his deals, probably because they didn't amount to much.

Mel Shorey Wins Sweeps

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Aberdeen, Md., August 15.—Mel Shorey, professional at the East Potomac Club in Washington, lowered the competitive course mark here today at the Forrest Greens Course with a 73 and won pro-sweepstakes and was second in the Middle Atlantic B. A. B. pro-amateur event with his partner, Tommy Doerer, jr. Carroll McMaster, Woodholme mentor and Otto Greiner, the Middle Atlantic and Maryland State amateur champion from Rodgers Forge won the pro-amateur play with a 67.

The nine-hole layout has a par of 76, the highest in this section, and 74s by McMasters and the host pro, Glenn Spencer, were the best previous scores.

Shorey was out in 38, with nine consecutive pars, and mixed three birdies with six pars on the back nine for the 73. His putter was the East Potomac mentor's principal weapon during the record setting round.

Walter Greiner, assistant to McMasters at Woodholme and brother of Otto Greiner, was a stroke back of Shorey with a 74.

Shorey and Lew Spangler, of East Potomac, scored a 70 in the pro-amateur and Shorey and Paul Cronin, of the host club, were a stroke higher.

Al Snyder Signed As Coach at Tome

Port Deposit, Md., Aug. 15 (AP).—Headmaster C. J. Keppel of Tome School announced today the appointment of Albert A. Snyder as coach of football, basketball and baseball for the coming school year.

Snyder was graduated with honors in June from Georgetown University, where he played end and was named to the All-District of Columbia team.

Sports Postscripts

If the "Boo Ferrell Club" has reached the membership proportions promised since the first word was spread Wes would pitch against the Nats during the current series, fans planning to attend had best be equipped with raincoats or other waterproof apparel . . . There's nothing quite so moist as a choice Washington raspberry as given by Nate Brown and others who will be found in boxes behind home plate . . . And not only will Ferrell need a thick skin to win, but also about 19 runs, according to local baseball writers . . . It seems the Nats, who make no secret of their dislike for the temperamental, hypocritical right-hander, have determined to knock him loose from his spindly underpinning in nothing flat . . . Meanwhile, Clark Griffith is simply weeping about the $7,500 lost when the Yankees signed Ferrell after passing him up at the waiver price . . . He'll only get that back when Ferrell pitches.

After a glance at the preseason training roster of the New York Giants, this department advises would-be professional football players to practically live in that cereal bowl of health-giving vitamins . . . It appears mere men aren't wanted any more; you've got to be of elephantine proportions . . . The average weight of the Giants' squad of 43 is (count 'em) 202.2 pounds, while the combined weight is 8,763 pounds, or slightly over 4 tons . . . Speaking of pro football have you noticed how the trend is changing? . . . Time was when most of its brightest stars came up from colleges you never heard of . . . But now larger salaries and scarcity of good after-graduation job offers are combining to lure the "name" players in ever-increasing numbers . . . Witness last year's all-star collegiate team . . . Of the 11 players who formed the starting line-up, 8 are now in the National League.

Steve Mamakos Beats Abrams on Decision

Yanks Here Today, Play Double Bill

Gomez and Ruffing Will Oppose Chase and Krakauskas.

Their pitching staff boldstered (?) by the addition of Wes Ferrell, the league-leading New York Yankees move in on the Nats today for a four-game series which will be launched by a doubleheader.

Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yanks, last night decided to withhold Ferrell from today's doubleheader, but he is expected to send the temperamental right-hander to the mound against the Nats on Wednesday or Thursday.

Today's double-header, necessitated by the 14-inning tie game between the two clubs on July 4, will find Clark Griffith's two pet southpaws—Ken Chase and Joe Krakauskas firing at the Yankees. Gomez and Ruffing will hurl for the Yankees.

Manager Bucky Harris is committed to a definite policy of left-handed pitching against the Yankees, and Elon Hogsett, ancient portsider, will make a start against the New Yorkers in a later game in the series.

In their outings against the Yankees last week at New York, Chase scored an impressive 4-1 victory but Krakauskas was beaten by the fielding errors of Buddy Lewis.

Ferrell's chance to pitch against the Nats spawned directly from the weakened condition of the Yankees' staff. With Lefty Gomez, Paul Andrews and Rookie Joe Vance suffering from injuries and illness, McCarthy finds himself short handed.

The league-leading Yankees won two of the three games from the Nats in Yankee Stadium last week, but profited from fielding misplays in both victories. The Nats pounded both Gomez and Chandler out of the box in the Yankee Stadium series.

With the return of Zeke Bonura to hitting form, the Nats are eyeing with renewed enthusiasm a high place in the first division. Their margin over the fifth-place Tigers now is five games and third place is only four games ahead.

Tiger Owner Elevates Two

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 15.—Announcement of the appointment of John (Jack) Zeller as general manager of the Detroit Tigers was made today by Walter O. Briggs, sr., president and owner.

At the same time it was announced that Walter O. (Spike) Briggs, jr., secretary-treasurer, had been elevated to the vice presidency formerly held by Gordon Stanley (Mickey) Cochrane, deposed manager.

Until today Zeller was director of minor league affairs for the Detroit Club. The announcement stated that the general manager's post had no connection with managing the club, the latter duty being left in the hands of Delmar Baker, former coach who was appointed to succeed Cochrane.

Briggs said Zeller would retain control of the scouting and the Tiger farms.

Zeller has been connected with the Tigers since 1923.

Bob Grove Hopes For Early Chance

Boston, Aug. 15 (AP).—Ole Mose Grove, whose defective salary arm has Boston Red Sox fans in the dumps, was dejected today but he intends to pitch again this season.

The oldtimer's left wing went dead in a game here July 14 and failed again on the Sox' recent Western trip, but Grove stoutly avers he is not through. "I'll work out with the team tomorrow," he said.

What's the Matter, George, Lose Something?

Cards Down Cubs, 8 to 4

Medwick and Myers Hit Home Runs.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Lon Warneke returned to his old stamping grounds today and, backed by 14-hit support, including home runs by Joe Medwick and Lynn Myers, hurled the St. Louis Cardinals to a seven-hit, 8-to-4 victory over his former Chicago Cub colleagues.

It was Warneke's fourth triumph of the Cards' current swing of the circuit and his eleventh of the season.

The defeat not only dropped the Cubs to a tie for third with Cincinnati and spoiled their homecoming, but also cost them the playing services of Manager Gabby Hartnett for an indefinite period. He was hit on the right thumb by o foul tip.

The Cards drove Clay Bryant from the box in the eighth after he had given up 13 hits. Warneke supplied the knockout blow after Mickey Owen had been intentionally passed, loading the bases. The Card hurler then lashed out a single, scoring Don Gutteridge and Myers.

Warneke himself had been unsteady on the mound at the start, but settled down and permitted just two singles during the last six innings.

A walk and singles by Billy Herman and Carl Reynolds coupled with a pair of infield outs scored two runs for the Cubs in the first inning. They scored their final two in the third on Rip Collins' triple, Augie Galan's double and a single by Frank Demaree.

Jane Dillard Sets New Swim Records

New Orleans, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Petite Jane Dillard, 17-year-old Fort Worth, Tex., high school student, tonight broke the Southern National A. A. U. 100-yard breast stroke records during the Southern A. A. U. aquatic championships. Miss Dillard's time of 1:18.2 bettered the national mark of 1:18.5 set in Chicago last year by Mrs. Katherine Rawls Thompson.

Hartnett Is Hurt By Foul Tip.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Manager Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, of the Chicago Cubs, was forced out of action when he was struck by a foul tip from the bat of Joe Medwick in the first inning of today's game with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Hartnett's right thumb was struck and X-ray pictures disclosed an incomplete fracture.

Dr. John H. Davis, the club physician, said tonight Hartnett would be out of the line-up "all of three weeks." He added that while Hartnett would not be able to catch for that period, he might be albe to break in as a pinch hitter "within 10 days or so."

Swim Meet Won by 'Y'

Compiling a total of 50 points, the men's Y. M. C. A. captured the men's division of the A. A. U. swimming meet last night at the Takoma Pool. Ambassador Swimming Club, with a total aggregate of 35 markers, led the field in the women's division.

Only one record was broken during the course of the evening's entertainment, which was witnessed by a crowd of approximately 2,000. The record broken was accomplished by Miss Betty Strohecker, 18-year-old Roosevelt High School maid, who clipped 4 seconds off her own record by capturing the 100-yard backstroke in the fast time of 1:24.4.

The race in the men's division wasn't even close, the Y. M. C. A. outdistancing its nearest opponent, the Shoreham Swimming Club, by 34 points in easily winning the meet. In this drive to victory, Ernie Boggs, its key swimmer, proved outstanding. He won the 150-yard backstroke and 200-yard free style events, in addition to forming an integral portion of the winning 300-yard medley relay team.

A dispute over the final outcome of the 100-yard breast stroke for women arose when Helen Mills nosed out Helen Flett, of Shoreham, by a scant 4 feet. It was later discovered that Miss Mills is employed by the Playground Department, in which case she would be ineligible for the trophy.

50-YARD FREE STYLE (for men)—Won by Karl Schmitt (Y. M. C. A.); second, Don Ka yoe (Ambassador); third, Ed Murphy (Y. M. C. A.); fourth, Harry Kolinsky (Shoreham). Time, 25.8 seconds.

50-YARD FREE STYLE (for women)—Won by Ann Bono (Shoreham); second, Anne Arnson (Ambassador); third, Ruth Little (Washington Golf and country Club); fourth, Pat Perry (Ambassador). Time, 31.8 seconds.

100-YARD BREAST STROKE (for women)—Won by Helen Mills (Ambassador); second, Helen Flett (Shoreham); third, Dot Farwell (Shoreham); fourth, Gloria Esle (Ambassador). Time, 1:35. (Miss Mills' victory is under protest, as she is at present employed in the playground department, which would make her ineligible for competition).

Bees Defeat Phils, 5 to 3

Warstler Leads Attack With Three Hits.

Philadelphia, Aug. 15 (AP).—Led by Rabbit Warstler, who blasted a triple and two singles in four trips to the plate and scored two runs, the Boston Bees, today bagged 13 hits off two Phillies pitchers to nose out the tail-enders, 5 to 3.

A single by West, an infield out on which West took third when the bag was uncovered, and Fletcher's double gave the Bees the deciding run in the eighth.

Dick Errickson, who relieved Johnny Lanning after the Phils had tied the score at 3-all in the seventh, was the winning pitcher. Sylvester Johnson gave up four of the Boston runs and was charged with the defeat.

Thistledown 'Double' Pays 2 Fans $1,183.

Cleveland, Aug. 15. (AP).—Two race fans were each $1,183.40 richer when they left Thistledown racetrack today.

They held the only two winning tickets on the daily double, which paid the top price for the track this year. Our Bessie, a 30-1 shot in the first race, and Little Bubbles, a 25-1 choice in the second, romped home to kick the jackpot.

Our Bessie paid $66.20, $18.20 and $8.60 and Little Bubbles blew her backers to $56.80, $16.20 and $4.80.

Reds Rally And Defeat Pirates, 6-2

Two Wild Heaves Aid Cause; Rizzo Hits Another Homer.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 15.—Cincinnati crowded six runs into the seventh and ninth innings today to come from behind and humble Pittsburgh's National League leaders, 6 to 2.

It was a game which varied from the sublime to the ridiculous as the rampant Reds collected three unearned runs in the ninth after both teams played tight ball in the early frames.

Lee Grissom, who made his third start of the year, gave only five hits in six innings before giving way to a pinch hitter, but one of these was Johnny Rizzo's thirteenth home run of the season.

This drive, in the second inning, soared over the leftfield fence 400 feet from the plate at approximately the same spot as his game-winning circuit drive yesterday against the Chicago Cubs.

Gets Three Singles.

Rizzo made three singles in his other three trips, and one of these scored Paul Waner, who doubled in the fourth.

But Jim Tobin, who had been faltering, finally lost this advantage in the seventh when Rookie Don Lang tripled and Lee Gamble and Allan Cooke contributed a pinch double and single for two runs.

However, the real blow-off came in the ninth after Nolen Richardson, subbing at short, opened with a sharp double. Lew Riggs attempted a sacrifice and Mace Brown elected to throw to third but his toss was wild, Richardson scoring. Linus Frey bunted to Brown again and this time the big pitcher's throw hit Frey and bounded away, Riggs scoring.

Frey Scores.

Frey, who went to third on the mixup, scored on Wally Berger's single. He, in turn scored on a sacrifice and single by Frank McCormick. Bill Swift finally put the Reds out.

Brown, who has worked parts of three games in four days, was charged with the loss. Joe Cascarella, who succeeded Grissom and worked only two innings, got the victory.

Loser Is Sent To Hospital; Back Is Hurt

Bullock Beats Huerta in 6-Rounder; Carino and Pitts Win.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Steve Mamakos, idol of Southwest Washington, poked and pawed his way to a stunning 10-round victory over George Abrams last night at Griffith Stadium, thereby wiping out the defeat incurred at the Jewish lad's gloved hands last winter.

He whipped a middleweight ranked ninth among the world's best by the National Boxing Association, and did it by the unbelievable margin of nine rounds to one. And he sent him to the hospital for good measure.

Abrams collapsed in his dressing room immediately after the fight, his perspiration-drenched frame writhing in agony. Dr. John De Mayo, boxing commission physician, administered a morphine injection to ease the pain, and ordered him removed to Emergency Hospital.

Old Injury Blamed.

Dr. De Mayo later said he thought Abrams had suffered a recurrence of an old back injury, a possible fracture of the fifth lumbar vertebrae. At the hospital X-rays were made to determine the extent of his injury.

Abrams did not appear to be up to par. He was sluggish, slow afoot and arm-weary early in the fight. He didn't use his left hand offensively more than a dozen times, and the clean shots he landed with his right were more than off-set by Mamakos' wind-mill tactics.

How much Abrams' injury had to do with his defeat is a matter of pure conjecture. After examining the fighters at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon Dr. De Mayo pronounced both in perfect condition and told reporters that neither could claim poor physical condition as an alibi if he lost.

Mamakos clung to his opponent like a leach, making him fight the way he (Mamakos) wanted him to most of the time, but there were occasions when Abrams fought like his old self, when he boxed and jabbed and made Steve look foolish with his clumsy round-house pawing.

Then, paradoxically, there were times when Abrams looked no better than a kid making his professional debut, when he seemed to lack the most elementary training. This was true particularly of the fourth round when Steve rocked him with right uppercuts, had his damp head bobbing like a cork in a millstream and thumped him almost at will with a ponderous left. This was the turning point of the fight, for Abrams never was able to right himself.

Hard Rights to Tummy.

The sorting gentry, which took more of a beating than Abrams after establishing him as a 9-5 favorite, was chagrined and surprised to see him walk out in the first round and make the mistake of trying to slug it out with the durable Greek. They had a prophetic glimpse of what was to follow when Abrams retired to his corner with a red rash on his forehead and cheek bone.

He boxed throughout the second and did well enough to win the round, but thereafter it was all Mamakos. The Greek boy exploded so many hard rights in George's tummy he appealed to Referee to stop him from hitting low. Only one low blow was visible from the press box and Mamakos won that round, the sixth, despite a two-point penalty.

Mamakos dogged his opponent like a bill collector. He went after him with both hands relentlessly punching to the head and body. When George did fight back in brief streaks Steve merely blinked and waded in again. He usually landed, to the head or in the pit of the stomach.

Bulloch Beats Huerta.

Billy Bullock, 131, outpunched Pancho Huerta, 127½, in the final round of a six round engagement to win a unanimous decision over the bronzed Mexican. Huerta was too easy to hit with straight right hands and did not have much of an offense, but he was willing and aggressive and forced the fighting.

Bullock piled up a commanding lead in the first couple of rounds clubbing Huerta with left hooks to the ear and right-crosses to the temple, then proceeded to loaf. Huerta, trying to get inside to work on the body, finally caught up with the District boy in the fifth and squared matters. Bullock, however, had things pretty much his own way in the last and decisive session.

Vince Carino, 122, of Richmond, won a majority decision over Baby Face Jerry Hall, 121, of New York, in a hard-fought bout. Carino was a trifle too fast and sharp with his left hook for Hall, and although Jerry scored with a couple of jolting rights he was too far behind to overtake the clever Virginian.

Willie Pitts, 125, outpointed Willie Green, 129, in a slow four-rounder. They are Washington featherweights.

Although ailing the last few days, Joey Green went through with his scheduled six-round bout with Johnny Sole and won a six-round decision. Green floored his man in the first round for no-count. Joey later collapsed on his way to the dressing room after the bout and had to be carried in bodily. He was given first aid and sent home.

Bill Ackerman on Fishing

Our personal catch was that of the usual week-end—nothing much to talk about, in spite of the fact that we fished late to get into the rock, that for the past week, have been raising, just at dark.

ACKERMAN.

Northwest of Holland Bar in Herring Bay on Saturday evening the boats caught up to 15 and 20, while on Sunday evening they failed to rise at all, even though there were plenty of signs and some were taken trolling deep with lead. Yet right around the corner, so to speak, they were catching big rock weighing up to 4 and 5 pounds almost on the shore. Many really nice catches were made from rowboats with outboards. This school should remain in this section for some weeks, if the amount of bait fish is any criterion on which to judge their actions.

The bluefish are continuing to hold forth on the Middles and have increased in weight as well as in the size of the catches. Hardly a one of the boats out of Ridge, but what come home with goodly numbers.

On Friday, Capt. Harry Woodburn at Solomons found a school many acres in extent, that were traveling as near as he could tell, up the bay. In the short time he was in them, some 20-odd were taken. There is every right to believe they will find the feed they are hunting in the neighborhood of Cove Point and probably linger there for awhile.

Two weeks until the Chesapeake Bay fishing fair at Rock Hall on the Chester River, August 27 and 28. Reservations are coming in from all over the East and it appears as though the small town will be taxed to the limit.

The Maryland Yacht Club is sending 110 yachts in a fleet under the command of Capt. Howard O. Jenkins to compete with several hundred other yachts from every section of the bay in the parade for the most attractively decorated.

Maryland's Oyster Navy will bring its fleet of 27 patrol boats, headed by the flagship Dupont, for inspection by the Conservation Commission, while the Coast Guard cutters Calypso and Pamlico will be on hand for patrol and emergency service.

The fair held last year at Solomons attracted some 1,500 anglers to the crab feast, but the Rock Hall fish-fry with short bread and black molasses should have an attendance of far more than 2,000.

Any doubt as to the result of President Roosevelt's angling trip to the Cocos and Galapagos Islands aboard the U. S. S. Houston was removed Thursday when three magnificent specimens of huge Pacific sailfish were received for mounting by Al Pflueger in Miami. None of the fish are for the President's private collection, however, the instructions calling for delivery to Basil O'Connor, Frederick B. Adams and Col. E. M. Watson.

The largest and most unusual tournament in the history of skeet will get under way September 1. Designed to attract new followers to the sport, it will be open to shooters of either sex anywhere in the world, who will compete for handsome prizes in teams of two. One member of every team must be a person who has never shot any part of a regulation round of skeet. This unique requirement is emphasized in the name of the competition—Outdoor Life Novet (Novice-Veteran) Skeet Tournament, and will probably be scored as is the Telegraphic Shoots. There are no entry fees and all prizes are donated by Outdoor Life.

The contest consists of three events. One—each member of a team will shoot a 50 target round—two and three call for 100 targets by each team member. The first event must be shot during September, the second during October, and the third during November. Though contestants must compete in all three events to be eligible for prizes, and must shoot them all as a team and in accordance with the official rules of skeet, the rounds may be shot on any skeet field anywhere so long as the scores are attested by a competent referee.

So that all contestants may compete on an equal footing, guns will be limited to 12-gauge or smaller, and the shot load to 1⅛ ounces of No. 9 or larger shot.

Prizes to be awarded the winning teams are silver medals of striking design, to go to each member of the team rolling up the highest score in any locality that enters ten or more teams. Scores will be the total targets broken in events two and three.

To date 43 large bluefin tuna have been taken on rod and reel as official catches in Nova Scotian waters, but as yet none has been caught off Liver. Boats from there have been fishing off Lunenburg, where a new ground for tuna angling appears to be developing. The heavy runs of big herring are gradually working inshore, however, and it is expected the big fish will follow them in. Another week should see it in full swing, so that by the time the International Tuna Angling Matches get under way on August 27 there will be plenty of large tuna to work on.

Paul Townsend, only local representatives in the matches, pulled a muscle in his forearm ten days ago, and if it doesn't improve a great deal in the next few days, it is unlikely that he will fish.

Freak 'Ace' Recorded.

Phoenixville, Pa., Aug. 15 (AP).—Ben Stapp scored a hole-in-one in his caddy's pants ocket. Stapp shouted "fore" as his ball sailed toward the boy, who turned sideways. The ball plumped into his pocket.

Vanderbilt Filly Downs Honey Seat

Brown Biscuit, a Half-Sister of Seabiscuit, Defeats Maidens.

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 15.—A. G. Vanderbilt's cerise and white banner was borne to an easy triumph in the Kentucky Claiming Stakes here today when the black filly Spot News, under "Sonny" Workman, flashed over the wire with two lengths to spare at odds of 18 to 5. Spot News was the first of two winners for Workman. The daughter of Trace Call—Lillabelle, conceding 5 pounds to each of her six rivals, ran 5½ furlongs in 1:06 1-5, collecting $2,605 in purse money.

Mrs. Walter Hochschild's Honey Seat, 8-to-5 favorite in this thirty-sixth running of the fixture for juvenile fillies, was second by three lengths over Millsdale Stable's Royal Bit.

Brown Biscuit, a 2-year-old half-sister to the star handicap horse Seabiscuit, graduated over eight other maiden lassies in the 5½ furlongs of today's initial event. Taken to the front just after the start by Ira (Babe) Hanford, the daughter of Sir Andrew—Swing On maintained a daylight lead to the end, scoring in easy fashion by three lengths in 1:06 3-5. The filly was a strong tip and was backed down to 13 to 5.

Grotesque Is Second.

Daughters of Equipoise, which recently died in Kentucky, accounted for the place and show. Grotesque, coupled with Hasty Wedding as the J. H. Whitney entry and favorite at 8 to 5, chased Brown Biscuit home. Equivalent was beaten four lengths for the place.

Mona Bell, a 7 to 10 favorite, made no mistakes in the second, a Class "D" handicap for 3-year-olds at 6 furlongs. With the popular Eddie Arcaro handling the reins, the filly held her field safe all the way, registering by a length and a half, well in hand. Dulie and the well-backed Hunting Home waged a nip and tuck duel for secondary honors. Dulie responded to the whip to outlast his rival by a head.

Roguish Girl Winner.

Benjamin Deutch's Roguish Girl, claimed from the Millsdale Stable for $3,500 when she finished second in a recent race, ran a mile in 1:36 2-5, one-fifth of a second slower than the track record, in winning the Class "C" handicap that was fifth on the card. The 5-year-old mare led by several lengths almost from the start and was much the best of the fillies and mares opposed to her. She clicked by three lengths, giving Jockey "Sonny" Workman his second straight success. Drowsy outran the others by a wide margin, holding a half dozen lengths margin over Mars Shield for the show. Roguish Girl paid 6 to 1. Drowsy was favorite.

Roman Lady Wins At 'Gansett.

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 15 (AP).—After following in the wake of R. S. Clark's Third Party and Ral Parr's King Pharamond as they battled desperately for the lead, Houghton P. Metcalf's Roman Lady today went to the front at the three-sixteenths pole and was never headed again as she drew away to a length and a half victory in the Watuppa purse, feature at Narragansett Park.

The Rhode Island-owned 3-year-old daughter of Cohort-Pretty Miss was timed in 1:42.1 and paid $3.90 to win.

King Pharamond paid $7 to place and finished a half length in front of H. Price Headley's Dah He that paid $2.60 to show.

There was no question but what Third Party and King Pharamond killed one another off by battling for the lead most of the race.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—She's Right got away on top and lead all the way to win the Englewood Purse at Washington Park today. Birdlea was second, a length behind, with Diavolo Boy, the favorite, third.

Victory was the second in a row for She's right. Ridden by J. G. Wilson, the filly owned by Paul Kelley raced the mile in 1:39 1-5 and paid $18.40.

Greyhound Wins In Straight Heats

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15 (AP).—The long-legged Greyhound, trotting champion of the Grand Circuit, scored a straight-heat victory without difficulty as the harness racing program opened at the Illinois State Fair today.

Winning easily, the big gelding from the Hotel Baker Stables, St. Charles, Ill., triumphed in the $4,000 added, all-age Matron Stakes, sponsored by the American Association of Trotting Horses. The times were 2:02¼ and 1:59½.

Majors Look To Southern For '39 Aid

Clubs Laying Big Money on Line for Stars in Southland.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Aug. 15. — Early player purchases by major league clubs from Southern Association teams indicate the Brooklyn Dodgers have turned serious thought—and considerable cash—to the 1939 campaign.

Clubs in the big show have already laid down money and players for a half dozen Southern Association stars, with the Dodgers digging into the bankroll for something approximating $75,000 for a trio of these class A-1 league performers.

Brooklyn's purchases were two of the prize catchers of the association, Charles (Greek) George, of New Orleans, and Stuart Hofferth, of Nashville, along with Bill Crouch, a batterymate of Hofferth. Crouch has won 15 and lost 8.

The Dodgers paid New Orleans the equivalent of $30,000 for George, the fiery Greek receiver who had a fling with Cleveland two years ago, and he caught the slants of Bob Feller when the youthful star equalled the major league strikeout record of 17. Two players and about $15,000 were involved in the deal, the players to be named later.

For Crouch and Hofferth, Nashville received $25,000 and two players from Brooklyn. Names of the players to figure in the deal were not revealed. The two Nashville players and George will report to the Dodgers in early September.

The Chattanooga Lookouts were believed to have received about $20,000 for Dee Miles, an outfielder ranked as one of the best in the league. He was purchased by the Philadelphia Athletics for cash and players to be named later, and will report next spring.

Rated Best Rookie.

Manager Chuck Dressen, of Nashville, rates Crouch as the best rookie hurler in the league. He started the season by dropping his first game and then won 11 in a row. "He has been in pro ball just a year now." Dressen said, "and has more stuff, control and change of pace than any pitcher I ever saw who had only that much experience."

Heinie Majeski, stocky Birmingham second baseman; Johnny Hill, Atlanta's veteran third sacker, and outfielders Maurice Van Robays, of Knoxville, and Joe Grace, of Memphis, are among others who have been under the eye of the majors' ivory hunting corps.

Diamond Slated For Garden Post

Lou Diamond, the broad-bellied gentleman who worked in George Abram's corner last night at Griffith Stadium, will be the new matchmaker for Madison Square Garden, it was learned from an authoritative source last night. He will succeed Tom McArdle.

The move will follow a break-up of the so-called Hearst A. C., of New York, which was comprised of several sports writers with Mike Jacobs as "front," who served as promoter. Jacobs has signed a new five-year agreement with the Garden, which he lifted out of the doldrums by his astute promotions, giving him exclusive rights to the Garden proper and Long Island Bowl for boxing.

Diamond, an intimate of Jacobs, has been promoting—or trying to promote, weather conditions being what they are this season, at West New York, N. J. He owns a share of Abrams' contract and undoubtedly will use the Washington boy frequently in New York.

Preakness May Gross $85,000 as 321 Are Entered

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 16. — Maryland Jockey Club officials, announcing a record number of 321 nominations for next year's Preakness, predicted the purse for the 1929 turf classic will gross $85,000.

There were only 173 nominations for last spring's running and Dauber, the winner, earned $89,500 for Owner William Dupont, jr.

Several years ago the club, operator of Pimlico, began a campaign to raise the Preakness purse to $100,000. An increasing number of nominations each year may boost it to that total by 1940, club officials said.

The jockey club adds $50,000 to the purse, the remainder coming from fees paid by owners of thoroughbreds nominated for the classic for 3-year-olds.

SELECTIONS AT CUMBERLAND.

Dear Al:

Well folks, I managed to shake off that vacation and I'm back at long last to eat and rest. I didn't get any closer to a horse than a couple of games of horseshoes and I must confess I couldn't even pick up the right ones. The least said about my fishing the better. So many fish took my bait without being caught that my hooks thought they were doing a strip-tease act. The next time I get an idea that I should go fishing, I'm going to buy a ton of shrimp, bloodworms and soft-shell crabs and lower the whole business by crane in the middle of the bay and then return to my hammock and book. I tried my line beside the boat, under the boat and finally became angry and cast out so far that I thought my line was entangled in the propeller of the Queen Mary, three days out of New York. When I finally reeled it back my bait was gone as usual and in its place were two clusters of seaweed. That's what you call "getting the beard on the bay." Perhaps its going to be unlucky at fish and lucky at horses. I do catch a winner now and then. I certainly was sorry to hear of the untimely end of the careers of Charles S. Payson's Thingumabob and the Glen Riddle Farm's Hauca. I feel sorry for the horses as well as the owners and breeders. They invest much money and work in the hope of getting good horses and only to have them eliminated in a single race. But turf accidents do not recognize class. There are 10-year-olds operating on the leaky-roof circuits who have escaped injury in long careers and stake horses who fail to circle a track. I wonder if there is

Bobby Bowers Takes Medal Honors in Rock Creek Meet

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Aug. 15.—Baseball's problem child comes home to his adopted papa.

If you were asked to name a man in bigtime baseball who is dizzier than the great Dizzy Dean, whom would you designate? Of course we must eliminate Al Schacht, baseball's professional clown prince. Permit me to stimulate your recollections by mentioning Wesley Cheek Ferrell.

CUDDY.

Wesley Cheek Ferrell makes no attempt at being dizzy like Jerome Herman Dean or tailcoated Al Schacht. Yet he gets my unqualified vote. New York's former mayor, Jimmy Walker, said: "I'll match my private life with that of any man." And I say, "I'll match the goofy baseball career of W. C. Ferrell with that of any player you may name."

The dizziest thing about Ferrell's career is that the goofy side was entirely unintentional. His "checkered" career was governed entirely by the stars. His horoscope forecast everything that happened.

• • • •

Maybe Ferrell is right. Something extraordinary must guide the destinies of a man who could plunge into a garbage can and come out smelling like a lilly. I mean Pitcher Ferrell was mighty lucky to be cast adrift unconditionally by Washington's Senators, and have all the major league clubs waive on him. And then to be snapped up by the New York Yankees who are zooming toward their third straight American League pennant. I mean that was Ferrell, the guy nobody wanted, will cut in for at least a half-slice of the next world series melon. And that half-slice will come to at least $3,500. That's in addition to his salary, which was very substantial with Washington.

The first time Wes Ferrell created a furore in the public prints was along about 1932 when he was throwing his right-handed smoke ball for Cleveland's Indians. Remember? At that time he gave off a statement in which he said that Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees was the best manager in all baseball, and that he was confident the Yanks would win the pennant that season.

Well, sir, Roger Peckinpaugh was managing the Indians at that time. When dark-complected Roger read that story, he almost jumped out of his skin. His irritation spread to other officials at Cleveland. Roger was so angry at all newspaper men that we almost had a fist fight, even though Ferrell meanwhile had denied the story—under pressure.

• • • •

Meanwhile the great Ferrell continued his career. Peckinpaugh left the Indians, partly because of his disagreement with Wes. Walter Johnson, "the big train," became manager, and Ferrell developed his famous sore arm. Wes, unable to pitch as he had done during his first four years as a regular on the big team—when he won 20 or more games each season—wanted to become an outfielder because he was a good batsman. Walter tried him as an outfielder, and discovered that he was worse shagging flies than he was—at that particular time—on the mound. So he continued as a pitcher.

Before the '34 season Wes went to Boston. He did fairly well there except for the fact that Player-Manager Joe Cronin, a very nice young Irish chap, suddenly developed a suicide complex. Every time Cronin saw Ferrell he reached for a handy gas jet or razor. It seemed that Ferrell figured the stars, and not Cronin, were guiding his destinies. Accordingly Wes walked off the mound during games twice in '36 and once in '37.

During the 1937 season Wes was traded to Washington, along with brother Rick, the very good catcher. His combination winning score for 1937 was 14 won and 19 lost. This year he won 13 and lost eight for the Senators.

• • • •

Clark Griffith, of the Senators, gave no specific reason why he gave Wes his unconditional release last Friday—except to say that he didn't fit in with Washington's plans for a 'young club. Nobody seemed to want Wes until suddenly Pitcher Joe Vance, of the Yankees, was stricken with appendicitis Saturday night. Then Joe McCarthy got him. The same Joe McCarthy, of the Yankees, whom Wes had described as the best manager in the majors. We wonder if eccentric Wes will say the same thing at the end of the 1938 season.

Second Hole Birdie Wins Over Nealis

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Bobby Bowers, 22-year-old Rock Creek Golf Club clerk, kept the medal in the Midsummer tournament right at home yesterday as he bested George Nealis in a playoff on the second extra hole after they tied with 72s in the 18-hole qualifying round over the uptown public links layout.

Bowers was out in 35 and back in 37 while Nealis reversed the scores as the co-medalists paced the field by three strokes. Bill Leapley was next with a 75 while four other players cracked the 80-mark, Larry Byers, George Graham and Junior Champion Gail Holmes with 78s and Pat Axtell, Harding Cup team alternate with a 79.

The 72s, although five shots over par for the short, but hazardous Rock Creek course, were considered exceptionally good scores as the weather-stricken greens were lightning fast and three and four putts were not unusual.

Aided By an Eagle.

An eagle on the 248-yard third hole on B course aided Bowers in playing the back nine in only one over par, the medalist driving the green and dropping a 15-foot putt. He birdied the ninth with a short putt after driving on the edge and chipping close. He lost five strokes to par from the fourth to eighth holes on A, as he went one over on as many consecutive holes.

Nealis lost his chance to win the qualifying honors as he went three strokes over par on the eighth hole of B course, missing the green, hitting a tree with his second and finally three-putting. He birdied four holes, the eighth with a 30-foot putt, 11 and 12 in succession and the long fifteenth with a 5-foot putt.

Bowers won the playoff on the second hole, after they halved the first in regulation pars. Bobby drove some 20 yards short of the temporary green, chipped within 8 feet of the pin and knocked in the putt while Nealis, hole-high off the tee, misjudged his approach and two-putted for a par.

Medalist Plays Holmes.

Anne Dolan paced the women players with a 46, 44—90 and meets Bobby Coleman in the second flight. Pairings, scores and starting times for the three flights.

Kovacs Dropped As Davis Cup Hope

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Walter M. Hall, former president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association and chairman of the Davis Cup committee, revealed today that Frank Kovacs, young Oakland, Calif., tennis player, was dropped from the Davis Cup squad three weeks ago.

"Discipline became necessary when Kovacs quit the Tri-State tournament in Cincinnati after the first round and compete in Nassau the same week," said Hall. "He insisted a sprained ankle wouldn't permit his playing on the Cincinnati courts."

Just a week ago George Hudson, who said he had coached Kovacs on the Pacific Coast, charged the U. S. L. T. A. with taking over Kovacs' career and telling the player to have nothing more to do with him.

Ambers Appears Unworried About Big Fight

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Banquet Due 'Skins Squad

Pros to Dine Tomorrow; 2 Players Released.

"Redskin Night" will be celebrated tomorrow night at the Shoreham Hotel, where a banquet will be held prior to the College All-Star game in Chicago, August 31.

Members of the Redskins squad, Coaches Ray Flaherty and Roy Baker and Owner George Marshall will be on hand, in addition to a number of guests.

A local sports announcer will be master of ceremonies of the radio show, which will be broadcast from coast to coast via Mutual Broadcasting Co.

On this program the Redskins official song, "Hail to the Redskins," will be dedicated. Corrine Griffith, former star of the silent screen and wife of Owner Marshall, wrote the words to the song, while the music was written by Barnee, Shoreham Hotel band leader.

"Slingin' Sammy Baugh, Capt. Turk Edwards and others of the Redskins championship eleven will be introduced to the American radio listeners.

The Redskins yesterday asked waivers on Ed Kawal, veteran center, and will release him outright in the event that no other club in the National pro league claim his services.

Kawal thus is the second veteran member of the Redskins' championship team to be cut loose. Halfback Ed Britt was released last week.

Kawal played the bulk of the games at center last season. With his passing, Coach Ray Flaherty is prepared to depend on the services of Red Krause, obtained last season from Brooklyn, and Mickey Parks, rookie from Oklahoma U.

Ambers-Armstrong Struggle May Set Record for Garden

Fans Rush for Tickets as Negro Remains 3-1 and 12-5 Favorite for Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 15.—Just when everyone was giving up hope, long lines of the faithful appeared in front of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club today and the Lou Ambers-Henry Armstrong lightweight title battle appeared assured of a large if not record-breaking audience.

Mike Jacobs viewed the ticket buyers with enthusiasm and announced he expected a sell-out when the two boys climb into Madison Square Garden's ring Wednesday night to battle for Ambers' lightweight crown—and Henry's welterweight laurels depending whether or not you listen to the New York State Athletic Commission.

The two gladiators wound up their heavy training today. There was nothing in either workout to switch the odds that have ranged from 3 to 1 to 12 to 5 in favor of Armstrong, the St. Louis Negro who holds the feather and welterweight crowns and has a yen to become the first man to hold three major titles at one time in the history of the beak-busting business.

Armstrong went in against Lew Feldman today and after correcting his aim for the fast, elusive Brooklyn lightweight knocked him flat with a left hook to the jaw. Feldman approximates Ambers' style enough to make this a cheering performance for the Negro's rooters and Henry, who has been worried about his timing, was in high good humor at the end of the workout.

Armstrong weighed 135 when he finished work at Pompton Lakes, N. J., today. He will punch the bag and shadow box tomorrow and expects to scale 133½ at the weighing-in ceremonies.

Ambers also went two rounds bringing his total preparation to 75 rounds—25 more than Henry. His cheering section led by Manager Al Weill and Trainer Whitey Bimstein talked largely of his condition.

They have good reason. Ambers' fast in-and-out style depends on his pins. Weighing 134 he went two rounds with Slugger White at top speed and showed a liking for infighting. The fight mob says this is the way he will fight Armstrong.

Lou's promise to make a fight of it probably has helped swell the gate at this late date. If he lives up to this and goes in there to tag Henry it will be a real one. For Henry hits hard and often himself. Whether Lou can tag him hard enough to slow him down is the question. It looks as though they will pack the Garden to find the answer.

2 Playground Finals Today

City playground tennis championships in two classes will be at stake on the Chevy Chase Playground courts this morning. At 10 o'clock, Bud Edwards, of Burroughs, and Red Bensinger, of Takoma, will clash for the junior division title with Mike Nunez, of Palisades, due to meet Arthur Abel, of Georgetown, an hour later for the senior laurels. This quartet advanced to the final through victories yesterday.

Yesterday's summaries:

Junior Division.

Senior Division.

Semifinals—Mike Munez (Palisades) defeated Tom Watts (Twin Oaks) 6—3, 6—1; Aruth Abel (Georgetown) defeated Jim Mulvihill (Hamilton) 6—3, 6—1.

Veterans Down Census In League Net Play

Veterans Administration defeated Census 5 to 0 in a Departmental Tennis League match on the Potomac Park courts yesterday.

Erana and Silva defeated Rulloda and Hansen by default; Sodolski and Weikner defeated Shamel and Grove, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4; Weiss and Hager defeated Hayward and Lawton, 6—2, 6—0; Pratt and Steninger won from Tyler and Linder by default; Haymaker and Fisher defeated Lenhardt and Kube by default.

Brownells to Play.

Bobby Brownell, recently crowned Middle Atlantic junior champion, and his father, J. V. Brownell, Manor, will defend their Maryland State Golf Association father and son championship at Hillendale Sunday, August 28. Several local teams will compete.

D. Workman Is Defeated In Net Play

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 15. All but one of the 12 seeded stars today survived the opening warfare of the Essex County Club's fourteenth annual women's invitation tennis tournament.

Dorothy Workman, the fifth-seeded "giant killer" from Los Angeles, was the lone exception, as she bowed to Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, 6—4, 4—6, 6—1.

The pair waged a gruelling duel from the back baselines during the first two lengthy sets and it was simply a case of which tired first under a blistering sun. At the end of the second set Miss Workman was noticeably the weaker and Miss Osborne ran out the final set with comparative ease.

Second-seeded Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., found the going none to easy in her first-round match with Patricia Canning, 16-year-old national hard courts champion from San Francisco. Miss Bundy was forced all the way to 8—6, 10—8 to overcome her surprisingly hard-hitting fellow Californian.

Only three of the 16 third-round matches remained to be played as 29 matches were jammed through despite breathless heat.

Those who marched on to third-round brackets included Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, Calif., top-seeded and the tournament favorite; Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Camridge, seeded third; Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., seeded sixth; Kay Stammers and Margot Lumb, of England, seeded second and fourth, respectively, on the foreign lists; Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, seeded third foreign, and Nancy Wynne and Thelma Coyne, of Australia, seeded fifth and sixth foreign, respectively.

In addition to the surprising Miss Osborne, only four other unseeded players entered the round of 16.

First Round.

Mrs. Johnny Van Ryn, Austin, Tex., defeated Anne Page, Philadelphia, 6—4, 6—4.
Barbara Winslow, Hollywood, defeated Anne Harrison, Buxton, Md., 6—2, 6—1.
Laura Morgan, Tucson, Ariz., defeated Joan Bigler, Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—4.
Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, Brookline, defeated Mrs. Ewart Seager, Vancouver, B. C., 6—2, 6—3.
Eunice Dean, Austin, Tex., defeated Marilyn McRae, Little Rock, Ark., 6—2, 7—5.
Mrs. Carolyn Babcock Stark, San Francisco, defeated Mrs. Pumi Toro Nakano, Japan, 6—1, 6—0.
Helen Pederson, Stamford, Conn., defeated Jane Stanton, Los Angeles, 6—0, 6—3.
Miss Dorothy Bundy, Santa Monica, Calif., defeated Patricia Canning, San Francisco, 8—6, 10—8.
Alice Marble, Beverly Hills, Calif., defeated Virginia Ellis, Brookline, 6—1, 6—1.
Virginia Wolfenden, San Francisco, defeated Margot Lee, Charlestown, R. I., 6—1, 6—4.
Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, France, defeated Patricia Henry, Los Angeles, 6—2, 6—1.
Thelma Coyne, Australia, defeated Laura Morgan, Tuscon, Ariz., 6—1, 6—3.
Nancy Wynne, Australia, defeated Eunice Dean, Austin, Tex., 6—2, 6—3.
Mrs. Carolyn Babcock Stark, San Francisco, defeated Marguerita Madden, Boston, 6—3, 7—5.
Margaret Osborne, San Francisco, defeated Dorothy Workman, Los Angeles, 6—4, 4—6, 6—1.

Marion Brown Wins At Congressional.

Marion Brown, District women's champion, won the visitors' prize in the Congressional Ladies Day Members and Guest event yesterday, the Manor star finishing with a net 40½ total for the selective nine holes in the 18-hole tourney.

Mrs. Merrill Lord, Columbia, was next with a 41 total with Mrs. H. W. Sharpe, of Indian Spring, third with 41½.

The members were paced by Mrs. J. O. Rhyne with the lowest score of the day, 39½, with Mrs. C. A. Stewart second, 41, and Mrs. R. E. Burks third with 45½.

'Reb' Russell, Olson Signed

Winner May Meet Yvon Roberts in Future.

A couple of Yvon Robert's most dangerous rivals will be lurking in the vicinity of Griffith Stadium Thursday night trying to get a new line on the French-Canadian who is making a determined bid to regain his world wrestling title.

The gentlemen are Cliff Olson, who won the decision over Roberts at Griffith Stadium two years ago when Yvon suffered a broken leg during their bout, and "Red" Russell, the old Rio Grande grappler.

Although there is a strong possibility that Turner may match one or the other with Roberts in the near future—provided he gets over Emil Dusek, Promoter Joe Turner last night said it was purely coincidental that both are on the card.

This bout, which will be the semi-final, may rival the main go as the feature attraction, for both are villains to the core. Olson has been getting away with everything but outright mayhem of late, and the fans are clamoring for his blood. They've been sour on Russell, too, but compared with the scowling Swede, "Red" is a fair-haired boy.

Turner has also arranged a match between blubber-like Bibber McCoy, winner of last week's battle-royal, and Jack League, the pleasing Texan.

Joanne Bransford Wins Net Match

Joanne Bransford defeated Mary Gray in the closest match of yesterday in the tournament being conducted by the Women's Tennis League at the Reservoir courts. The score was 6—3, 7—5.

Upsets Mark First Round At Newport

Sabin Loses in Opener and Hughes Quits During Play.

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 15.—Defying temperatures that soared almost to the 100 mark on sun-baked courts, a bulky field today launched the twenty-second Newport Casino invitation tennis tournament by sweltering through 43 matches that produced two major upsets.

Both reversals were caused by the heat. The sixth ranking Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles, seeded ninth here, was unable to continue at high speed against Norbert Burgess, of Chicago, and was eliminated in a first-round match, 6—4, 6—3. G. Patrick Hughes, British Davis Cup player, felt so wilted after dropping the first set of his second rounder against Gerard Podesta, of New York, by a 7-5 margin that he defaulted to the former Princeton player.

Budge Is Detained.

Champion Don Budge, who is expected to climax the resumption of his singles competition with his third straight Casino triumph, was detained in New York and his opening match against Bobby Low, of New York, was put over until tomorrow morning.

Second-seeded Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, arrived in time to keep his first-round engagement with Don Martin, of Newport, and gained an easy 6—4, 6—2 victory.

Third-seeded Frank Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif., swept through two rivals to qualify for the fourth round, as did Johnny Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., while gaining a bracket over the other successful seedings—Wilmer Allison, Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, Elwood Cooke and Frankie Kovacs.

Only four of the eight seeded foreigners were available for the first day's play and three of them came to grief.

Hare Beats Stephens.

Charles Hare, of England, who topped that list, had little trouble disposing of Harris Stephens, St. Louis, 6—1, 6—1, but the rest of his countrymen were eliminated with dispatch.

R. S. Shayes, ranked fourth among the invaders, was beaten by Van Ryn, 6—2, 4—6, 6—0, in the second round action, and Gil Hunt, of Washington, one of the 23 to win, second round brackets, did so by defeating E. J. Filby, a young Britisher having his first fling at American tennis, by a 6—4, 6—0 margin.

Bernard Destremeau, Yvon Petra and Jacques Brugnon, of France, were delayed a day, as were Robert Mouvert, of Belgium; Sydney Wood and Gene Mako, the latter pair ranking eighth and tenth on the domestic list.

Cab Interests Organize New Insurance Co.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Formation of the Columbia Mutual Insurance Co. was announced yesterday by John H. Royer, jr., president of the Premier Cab Association, who will serve as president of the new company. Raymond A. DuFour is vice president, R. Logan Hollowell, secretary and counsel, and Maynard T. Ryan, comptroller.

This company, organized to meet the requirement under the law enacted at the last session of Congress and effective August 29, is completely owned and managed by the members. A charter has been issued by the Insurance Department of the District of Columbia and reserves have been set up to cover protection effective August 29. Coverage effected provides for $1,000 of property damage and is limited to $5,000 and $10,000 of personal liability for the cab riders.

Mr. Royer, who was one of the organizers of the Premier Cab Association in 1932, has had an exceptional career in the local transportation field. Starting with three cabs and working out of a service station at Fourteenth street and Florida avenue northwest, the organization now has one of the most completely equipped service stations and taxi depots in the District. Space occupied comprises 36,000 square feet of land extending from Sherman avenue to Ninth street northwest.

Included in the plant is a three-story structure which houses the offices of both the Columbia Mutual Insurance Co. and headquarters for the cab association. Improvements in excess of $20,000 have been expended this year on this service center located at 2337 Sherman avenue northwest and plans are in process of development for the opening of a restaurant and gymnasium for the use of members.

No Fare Change.

Commenting on the rate situation, Md. Royer stated that in his opinion there should be no change in the passenger fares at the present time and that such adjustment as is made in the future should be based on the insurance experience under the new law. Since inception, members of the Premier Association have been handling their own insurance through the medium of a reserve fund. He stated further that due to a careful selection of its membership, the association has established an unusually good accident record and he expressed the opinion that a continuation of these policies in the future under the insurance requirements will result in a highly satisfactory dividend experience for the new company.

He feels that the insurance requirements will tend to stabilize the taxicab industry by removing irresponsible and careless drivers. Mr. Royer, a native of Oklahoma, is a graduate of Tech High School, and also attended George Washington University. He is now a member of the senior class of Columbus University School of Law.

Building Exposition.

Twenty-five nationally known American corporations and associations, whose products and services directly affect new building, will join with the Mortgage Bankers Association of America in sponsoring the second annual "Exposition of Building Industry and Services" at the Drake Hotel, in Chicago, October 12-14 in conjunction with the organization's twenty-fifth "Silver Jubilee" convention, A. D. Fraser, president, announces. The exposition was inaugurated last year at the twenty-fourth annual convention in Cleveland and is being con-

Cotton Steady; December 8.24

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Cotton turned steadier today on trade and scattered buying which absorbed early foreign selling. December recovered from 8.18 to 8.26 and closed at 8.24, with final prices 2 to 3 points net higher.

The market eased early to net losses of 2 to 3 points under selling from abroad and a little Southern hedging. More scale-down mill price-fixing and some commission house buying was encountered on the decline and when foreign markets closed, advances of 5 to 8 points from the lows followed on a moderate demand. Bombay was credited with selling at the opening and renewed offerings from that source late in the session accounted for reactions of a few points from the best.

Futures Price Range.

	High.	Low.	Close.
October	8.18	8.10	8.16
December	8.26	8.18	8.24
January	8.25	8.20	*8.24
March	8.29	8.22	8.27
May	8.30	8.25	8.29
July	8.31	8.27	*8.31

*Nominal.

Spot, steady; middling, 8.27.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil declined 6 to 8 points early today under scattered liquidation promoted by the easiness of lard and cotton and lower crude oil, but rallied later on renewed covering and in sympathy with steadiness of outside markets. Final prices were unchanged to 5 points net higher. Sale, 110 contracts. Bleachable, spot, nominal; September closed 8.03; October, 8.04; December, 8.04; January, 8.05; March, 8.09.

Farm Administration officials said late yesterday that a drop to 8.20 cents a pound in the average closing price of cotton on the ten designated spot markets apparently made 1938 cotton loans mandatory under the new farm act.

The law requires a loan program when the spot price dips below 52 per cent of parity. AAA officials said the prices at which loans must be made was about 8.25 cents a pound.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury August 12: Receipts, $15,811,853.56; expenditures, $15,256,599.55; net balance, $2,230,544,842.91, including $1,636,520,793.07 working balance; customs receipts for the month, $11,169,284.59.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $641,734,570.90; expenditures, $1,102,224,168.89, including $310,650,794.67 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $460,489,597.99; gross debt, $37,361,977,740.58, an increase of $9,808,824.13 above the previous day; gold assets, $13,040,180,078.09.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Rally Moderately After Six Days' Decline but Wheat Slumps.

New York, Aug. 15.—Security and commodity markets started the week by attempting to shake off the influence of the previous six days of trading, during which stocks receded without an interruption, the dollar gained at the expense of other currencies as hoarders rushed to buy gold in the open market in London and commodities retraced former gains. They were partially successful. Stocks had a mild rally. Measured by the composite average it was only 0.17 point, but it was the first gain in more than a week.

The rush for gold continued but not at the rate of last week and business in the foreign exchange market was quieter. In commodities cotton held about unchanged but wheat sank to new lows for the last five years. A semblance of quiet on the world's two most important war fronts helped to bring about the partial readjustment today.

But while the readjustment was going on in securities, the situation in commodities held the interest of the financial district, and it was far from quiet. For as wheat futures sank to their new lows and cotton continued irregular, the sympathy of the street went out to Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, who now appears in the role of the one-armed paperhanger as he attempts to avoid carrying out provisions of laws which he sponsored. The Secretary is not only faced with the problem of discovering technicalities which will permit him to break, at least the spirit, of his own laws but he must find a way to make the taxpayers make up to the farmers for the unwillingness of nature to become regimented.

Commodities.

We have now had five years of planning in agriculture and the price of wheat is nearly as low as it was during the depths of the depression. On Saturday cotton went to a level where it appeared that a Government loan would become mandatory, but the Department of Agriculture skipped this one, temporarily at least, when a new set of figures was produced over the week-end which lowered what is known as "parity." Parity is the purchasing power of cotton relative to manufactured goods that existed in the 1909-1914 period. If the price falls below 52 per cent of this figure, the loans are mandatory, but thanks to the department's economists and their conference over the week-end, it was found that parity has just changed, which is very fortunate as this is an election year and some of the taxpayers might not like to see the Commodity Credit Corporation pour out a lot of money in a section of the country which will vote right anyway.

All may go for naught, however. For cotton failed to rally today. It had a minor gain of 2 to 3 points, which is virtually nothing. And Farm Administration officials said the closing price of cotton on the ten designated spot markets apparently made loans mandatory. It is not official yet, and possibly the economists can rush into conference again and lower parity a bit further; or if this fails the Secretary of Agriculture may be able to find some other technicality.

The recovery in the stock market today was not too satisfactory for the bullish forces. In addition to being very small, it was made on the smallest volume of trading since August 1, only 593,000 shares changing hands.

Bond trading on the stock exchange was dull and prices irregular today as speculative rails led the list to somewhat lower ground. Sales on the big board totaled only $3,190,000 par value with the greatest activity during the first two hours of trading. Governments were dull and irregularly higher. The Herald Tribune index of 30 bonds lost 0.12 points to 85.22, which compares with 99.06 a year ago

The weakness in second grade rails managed to pull better quality carrier obligations off in later trading after that had held firm until mid-afternoon. Public utilities showed more resistance, with gains and losses about equally divided. Industrial liens ended the day with fractional changes.

Gains were scored by Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh 4½s, Brooklyn Union Gas refunding 5s, Mobile & Ohio 4s, Reading B 4½s, Parmelee 6s, Western Union 5s and Southern Railway general 5½s. Southern Pacific issues were also in good demand.

The foreign bond section was uneasy, being featured by weakness in Polish 7s, Cuban 4½s and Japanese 6½s. French 7s of 1949 recorded a 2-point gain, compared with the 3½-point loss of the Polish 7s. South American obligations were generally higher.

Lumber Committee Anticipates Upturn

Lumber consumption for 1938 was estimated at 20,000,000,000 feet by the lumber survey committee in its twenty-nineth quarterly report submitted yesterday to the Department of Commerce. This compares with 24,000,000,000 feet consumption in 1937.

The committee said an upturn along the lines of increased consumption in residential building, especially in small homes, and in public construction, with expected accompanying gains in demand in the furniture, millwork and flooring industries was anticipated for the remainder of 1938 and into 1939.

Lockheed Starts Order For British Airways

Los Angeles, Aug. 15.—Officials of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation announced today that the first of a four-plane order for British Airways will leave this week for London, where it will be used for pioneer work and survey flights over the first stage of a new route connecting the principal capitals of Europe with West Africa and South America.

The planes are Lockheed 14's of the same basic design as the one used by Howard Hughes in his recent world-girdling flight.

Wheat Drops As Huge Crops Loom in Canada

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Canada's prospects of more than doubling in 1938 her 1937 harvest proved to be a decided factor today in forcing Chicago prices down 1½ cents. Five-year low-price records here, frequently outdone of late, were once again thrown into the discard.

Estimates current from authoritative sources indicated that production in Canada's prairie provinces this season would range from 340,000,000 to 350,000,000 bushels, against 163,721,000 bushels last year. A further weight on values was a tentative forecast that Australia's 1938-39 wheat seeding would total 14,179,000 acres versus 13,807,000 the previous season.

All advices at hand emphasized large probable wheat supplies in excess of normal requirements, and much talk was prevalent that Canada and the United States would actively compete to fill Europe's limited needs.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅛-1½ cents lower compared with Saturday's finish, September 60⅜@60½, December 62⅝@62¾, corn ¾-1⅜ down, September 50⅝@50⅞, December 47¼@47⅜, oats ⅛-¼ off, rye showing 1 cent to 1⅜ drop, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to 7 cents advance.

Business Hit Bottom in June Col. Ayres Says

But Danger of Great War in Far East Is a Threat, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 15.—"It seems probable," Col. Leonard P. Ayres said today, "that the bottom of this renewed depression was reached in June." Writing in the Cleveland Trust Co.'s monthly business bulletin, the Cleveland economist said:

"The present improvement in business is unmistakable, but it has not yet lasted long enough to let us know whether or not it is producing the developments that would insure a durable recovery.

"One important fundamental element in its favor is that we are probably going to have this year one of the largest agricultural harvests in our history. The prices will be lower than last year, but the prospective abundant harvests constitute a most favorable factor in the economic outlook.

"The most threatening factor is the danger of another great war in the Orient."

On the gloomy side, Col. Ayres said "All our important business recoveries from depressions have been sustained by increased expenditures by business enterprises for enlarged plants, improved equipment, and the financing of new undertakings. So far in this upturn few signs of such increases have appeared."

Ad Club Fetes C. B. Dulcan on 50th Birthday

Meeting at Raleigh Honors General Manager of Hechts'.

At a luncheon meeting in the Raleigh Hotel, speakers paid high tribute to Dulcan and his years of work in behalf of Washington. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen cited Dulcan's "many untiring years" of civic service and wished him "continuing success during the next 50 years."

Praise from Carruthers.

L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, congratulated him and urged everyone to follow his example by showing "a deeper interest in civic matters."

Short tributes to Dulcan were paid also by Edgar Morris, chairman of the Greater National Capital Committee and Dr. J. L. B. Murray, president of the Cosmopolitan Club.

Cuts Cake.

Last night at the Woodmont Country Club, Dulcan was tendered a dinner by his associates of the store.

The dinner was climaxed by a ceremony in which Dulcan cut a birthday cake nearly six feet high. He was presented gold trophies as mementoes by his associates in The Hecht Company. The guest list included:

Death Takes C. C. Williams, Archeologist

Capital Scientist, 85, Was Authority on Plays of Shakespeare.

Chauncey C. Williams, well-known archeologist and Shakespeare authority, died at the age of 85 Sunday night at his home, 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. A semi-invalid for many years, Mr. Williams had been seriously ill since March.

Services will be held at the home tomorrow at 11 a. m. Burial will be in Odell, Ill.

Mr. Williams had lived in Washington about 50 years. He retired from a position with the Pension Office when he was 52 and since had devoted his time to travel and the study of Egyptology and Shakespeare.

Born in Grosyenordale, Conn., in 1853, Mr. Williams was the son of Hulda Shumway Williams and John Williams. On his mother's side he was descended from early Huguenot immigrants. His great-grandfather, John Williams, fought in the Revolutionary War.

At the age of six he went with his parents to live in Odell. He studied at nearby schools and at Northwestern University. Later he attended Boston University, where he graduated in 1877 and afterwards received his Ph. D. degree. His death leaves only one surviving member of the class of '77.

At Boston University he founded a chapter of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity. He was dean of the Washington alumni chapter of the fraternity.

Mr. Williams was a charter member of the University Club and belonged to the Sons of the American Revolution and the Archeological Society. He had been a member of All Souls' Unitarian Church for more than 40 years and also was a member of the Unitarian League.

Before coming to Washington, Mr. Williams taught in schools in Kings' Mountain, N. C., and in San Mateo, Calif. During the Shakespeare tercentary celebration, he gave several lectures here on the dramatist's work.

Mr. Williams married the former Lilian Arthur, a native of Staunton, Va., about 30 years ago. Besides his widow, he is survived by a nephew, Louis G. Clarke, of Oxford, Mass., and a niece, Miss Florence Quiggle, of New York City.

Col. Wieczorek's Burial to Be in Arlington Today

Services for Lieut. Col. George A. Wieczorek, U. S. A., retired, of Catonsville, Md., will be at Arlington Cemetery at 10:15 a. m. today. Col. Wieczorek died Saturday in Walter Reed Hospital.

The funeral procession will form at the Fort Myer gate. Chaplain William R. Arnold, chief of chaplains, will officiate at the services.

A member of the Signal Corps at the time of his retirement, Lieut. Col. Wieczorek served as an enlisted man in the Infantry from 1899 to 1901, when he was promoted to second lieutenant. Later he was transferred to the Signal Corps. He was retired at his own request in 1929, nine years after receiving the rank of lieutenant colonel. He was a native of Hartford, Conn.

Col. Wieczorek was awarded the Purple Heart for a wound received in action in 191.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Corinne Wieczorek, and four children, all of Catonsville.

Mrs. Louise Perry Dies at 81; Brief Rites Set Today

Mrs. Louise Perry, 81, widow of Brig. Gen. David Perry, U. S. A., died Saturday at the Wyoming Apartments, Columbia road and California street northwest, after an illness of about two years.

Brief services will be held at her residence today at 10 a. m. followed by another service at the grave in Arlington Cemetery. She will be buried in the same plot with her husband who served the Army more than 40 years.

A Washington resident since 1901, Mrs. Perry was active in the Daughters of the American Revolution and in church activities. She was born in Greenwich, Conn., the daughter of Dr. James H. and Elizabeth S. Hoyt.

Survivors are a sister, Mrs. I. H. Espy, and a daughter, Miss Mabel Perry, both of the Wyoming Apartments.

Carolinians to Cruise.

The North Carolina Democratic Club will hold its annual moonlight cruise on the Potomac Thursday. The boat leaves the Wilson Line wharf at 8:30 p. m. and returns about midnight.

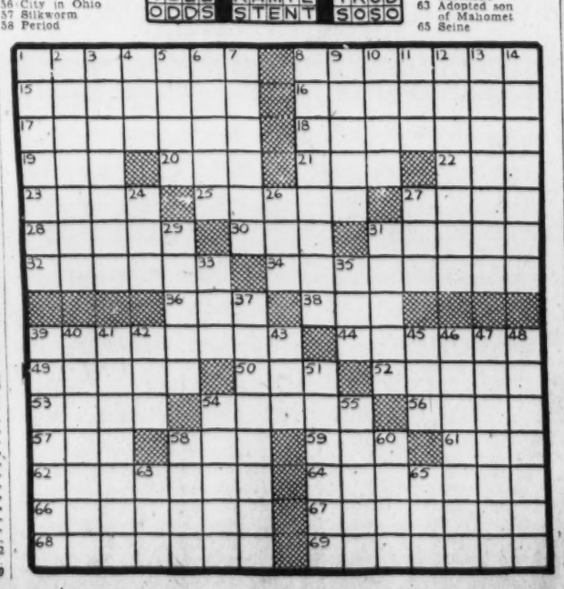
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.



Mrs. Hetfield, D. C. Resident, Dies on Coast

Member of Old Capital Family Helped Form St. Anthony's Parish.

Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Mary Brawner Hetfield, 76, in San Diego, Calif., last Thursday. A lifelong resident of Washington, Mrs. Hetfield had been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Earl Carr. She had been ill about six months.

Mrs. Hetfield was the daughter of William H. and Emily Orme Brawner and came from a family well known in Washington for many generations. She was a graduate of the Georgetown Convent and a member of the Army-Navy Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

One of the original members of St. Anthony's parish, she was active in organizing the parish and in speeding the construction of St. Anthony's Church. A pioneer resident of Brookland, she made her home at 1233 Lawrence street here.

Her husband, Charles K. Hetfield, a Civil War veteran, died about 20 years ago. He had been an employe of the Postoffice Department for many years.

The body will be brought here for burial in Rock Creek Cemetery. Requiem mass will be said at St. Anthony's Church tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Survivors besides Mrs. Carr are another daughter, Mrs. Maxwell O. Johnson, of Honolulu; two sons, Dr. W. B. Hetfield, of San Francisco, an Army surgeon; F. W. Hetfield, of Washington, and three sisters, Mrs. Emily B. Woodward, Miss Frances Brawner and Miss Eleanor B. Brawner, of Washington.

Mrs. Freley Dies Here at Age of 89; Educator's Widow

Mrs. Frances Augusta Freley, 89, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Irving W. Ketchum, 3019 Forty-fifth street northwest.

Mrs. Freley was the widow of Prof. Jasper W. Freley, for 20 years head of the physics department and for 4 years acting president of Wells College, Aurora-on-Cayuga, N. Y.

Since the death of her husband in 1925 Mrs. Freley has een living with her daughter, wife of the pastor of the Peck Memorial Chapel.

Surviving, besides her daughter, are a sister, Mrs. R. S. Herrick, and a brother, John Taylor Slack, both of Springfield, Vt., and a grandson, Paul Freley Ketchum, of Washington.

Funeral services, to be conducted by the George W. Wise Co., will be held at her home at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will take place Thursday at Goshen, N. Y.

William P. Billings Dies in California

William P. Billings, 62, collector of internal revenue at Honolulu and a former Washington resident, died of a heart ailment in Auburn, Calif., Sunday, according to the Associated Press. He was stricken on a train en route to the West Coast from Indianapolis and was removed from the train at Auburn.

He and Mrs. Billings had been visiting in Indianapolis, where he was born and where he directed the collection of internal revenue from 1930 to 1936. They were returning to Hawaii when he became ill. Mrs. Billings said she would accompany her husband's body back to Indianapolis.

Mr. Billings lived in Washington from 1900 to 1917, serving at the Census Bureau, the General Land Office and the Postoffice Department. He had been revenue agent in Honolulu since 1936.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Aug. 15 (AP). Authorities here tonight were trying to find relatives of Goodman A. Benson, 67, railroad signalman, who died in his signal tower here Saturday with $5,500 in his clothing.

Benson's room contained 15 suits, 150 shirts and much other clothing, much of which had never been worn.

Guy N. Collins, Avocado Pear Finder, Dies

U. S. Botanist Also Was Discoverer of Cotton Used in Southwest.

Guy N. Collins, 67, Agricultural Department botanist who introduced the avocado pear in this country, died Sunday at his home in Lanham, Md. His remains were cremated.

Mr. Collins discovered the forerunner of the avocado pear in 1904 in Guatemala. When cross-bred, it formed the type now used commercially in the United States.

Among his other important discoveries was the type of cotton now grown extensively in the Southwestern United States. Mr. Collins found this cotton in 1906 while on an expedition near the city of Alcala in Mexico. He also was one of the first botanist to recognize the importance of hybrid corn now grown in almost the entire corn belt of the West.

After leaving Syracuse University in 1891, Mr. Collins conducted research explorations among colored persons in Liberia under auspices of the New York Colonization Society.

Associated with the Department of Agriculture since 1899, he made numerous scientific trips to Mexico, Guatemala, Costa Rica, Puerto Rico and Haiti.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Christine Collins; two sons, Dr. George B. Collins, professor of physics at Notre Dame University, South Bend, Ind.; and Perez H. Collins, Wilmington, Del., and two stepchildren, Comdr. L. J. Hudson, U. S. Navy, and Mrs. James H. Kempton, Lanham.

Robert T. Talbert, Police Hero, Dies Of Heart Attack

Robert T. Talbert, 58, retired police hero, was striken with a heart attack yesterday in the 700 block Quebec place northwest, and died before medical aid could reach him.

Talbert was found slumped in his machine after it had crashed into a tree. He had left his home, 467 Luray place northwest, about ten minutes before. The body was taken to the Morgue for an autopsy.

Mr. Talbert retired from the police force November 11, 1937 because of heart trouble. He was cited for bravery three years ago when he captured Charles F. Hisey, slayer of Virgie Rose Lyttel, after having been shot by the man.

Mr. Talbert is survived by his widow, Mrs. Servella Talbert; four children, Mrs. Lucy Morrison, 33; Gertrude Talbert, 31; Raymond Talbert, 29, and Marian Talbert, 20.

Life's Darkest Moment

MATHEWS, THIS ISN'T A BAD LETTER TO YOUR MOTHER, BUT IT'S FRIGHTFULLY MISSPELLED. NOW SUPPOSE YOU SIT DOWN AND LOOK UP ALL THOSE WORDS IN MY DICTIONARY- TOOTHBRUSH, COMB, SOAP, AND ALL THE REST. I'LL LET YOU OFF FROM SWIMMING CALL AND CANOE PRACTICE, SO YOU'LL HAVE PLENTY OF TIME TO DO IT

Bob Burns

Says—

I jest read where it takes 65 calories of energy jest for a human bein' to lie in bed and sleep and if you snore it takes 12 calories more. I don't know what a calorie is but it kinda scares me when I think how many I've been wastin' all my life when it wasn't necessary.

Maybe my Uncle Vag ain't lazy after all. Maybe he's jest found out the scientific way to save them calories.

One day when he was lyin' out under a tree, the wind blew his hat off and when he didn't budge, I says, "Ain't you gonna chase your hat?" And he says, "No, I'm gonna wait here—maybe the wind'll change."
